Let's Go Chicago.
Mr. Davis Promises.
The Akron Disaster.
No Revolution Here.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE

MAYOR KELLY, of Chicago, who has been in office one month and very busy, begins on the radio his "Let's Go Chicago" week.

Readers are advised to take Mayor Kelly's advice and GO to Chicago, first to see the great exposition, second to see Chicago, wonder city of the world, third, to learn from citizens of Chicago how Mayor Kelly is attending to the business he took over after the unfortunate death of Mayor Cermak.

MAYOR KELLY, born in Chicago, seems to know his city. He began by driving out many undesirables, racketeers, thugs and others that have infested Chicago, and other great cities.

He has paid four months' salary to public school teachers that had not been paid for a long time, and given police back pay sufficient to content them. His plans for putting on a sound basis conditions that have made Chicago uncomfortable are effective plans.

MAYOR KELLY, who starts work at nine in the morning and stays until late at night, has made it clear that almost any spot in the United States will be safer for holdup men and others of their type than the city of Chicago during the exposition summer, and thereafter, while he is Mayor.

Don't fail to see the great exposition. Chicago's new Mayor guarantees that you will see Chicago at its best, and see a really great fair. And he will be personally "on the job" to look after your welfare.

MR. NORMAN R. DAVIS, friend of the League of Nations, seems to have made promises to Europe concerning United States' action, in case of war over there.

The United States, according to dispatches from London, would enter a "consultative pact," whatever that may be, and "abandon neutrality rights to maintain peace."

EUROPEAN NATIONS are not sure that they can resist the temptation to cut each other's throats, but they will make a noble effort if the United States will promise to mix in their affairs once more in case any European nation should start war against another.

Europeans are delighted with Mr. Davis' vague promises, but it is as well to tell them that they don't mean anything.

Young men of the United States will not be conscripted to be sent abroad again, to join Europe's battles. Taxpayers of the United States will not again be loaded down with billions of bonds for loans to Europe that will never be paid back.

THE AVERAGE American feels that if Europeans cannot resist the temptation to cut each other's throat, it would be just as well for them to go ahead and cut each other's throat and for us to keep out of it.

This country has had enough of Europe's wars, and enough experience with Europe's ideas about debts of honor.

THE AKRON, costing many millions, was built by the order of the United States and sent into the air with men that lacked experience in operating such a ship.

The government had in its service one man, Commander Rosendahl, who could have managed the Akron and brought it safely through the storm that destroyed it.

But the Navy, obedient to antiquated tradition, rules that every sailor must spend a certain amount of time "at sea." So Rosendahl was taken from his work as an airship commander and put to work on a warship, "to do his sea time." Nothing more stupid could be imagined. Those responsible for that blunder destroyed the Akron.

WHEN LOCOMOTIVES came in, if the Navy had been in control, every engineer, presumably, would have been compelled to spend a certain amount of time driving a stage coach, while greenhorns took charge of the locomotives!

CONCERNING THIS rule that compels a competent airship commander to go back to the floating ship, the following comment is received by wire from W. R. Hearst:

"Rosendahl, great flier, was taken off to give command to a higher naval officer, who did not know his business and had never even landed the Akron. Everybody knows the result.

"Rosendahl is now first lieutenant on the battleship West Virginia, he is seventeenth in line of promotion. The Navy seems to consider sea service as air service. If we are to have modern air service in this country, we should better appreciate competent air men."

A SYMPOSIUM of "high brow" personalities, publishing their conclusions, in a book called "Recovery Through Revolution," decides that revolution here in America is unlikely, or as the book puts it, the prospects are "by no means exhilarating."

One learned professor finds that the United States hasn't digested Karl Marx, whose ideas rule Russia, and annoy Hitler.

The United States doesn't even know Karl Marx, much less suggest him. And revolutions are not made from the bottom. They come from the top.

The peasants of France endured every conceivable misery, and horrible injustice. There was no thought of revolution

Mrs. Armstrong, Widow 3 Times, Marries Again

Mrs. Edward Lauinger

PITTSBURGHER HUSBAND NO. 4

Mrs. Ethel Lewis Wilson Armstrong, the widow of Joseph G. Armstrong, has done it again!

She is a bride today for the fourth time—the wife of Edward Lauinger.

The attractive, up-to-date brunette of 40 was married on May 5 in Dade City, Fla. She and her husband are living in Miami.

Lauinger is approximately the same age as his bride. In Pittsburgh he lived for several years at Webster Hall.

News of the wedding was confirmed today by Mrs. Lauinger's sister, Mrs. Edith Federkeil, of Acmetonia.

Mrs. Lauinger, then known as Mrs. Ethel Wilson, and Armstrong, a County Commissioner and long a political boss in Allegheny County, "eloped" to Philadelphia in June of 1930. She was 37, he was 63.

In November, 1931, Armstrong died. His will, written before he married Mrs. Wilson, did not mention her name, but by law she received one-third of his estate, which had shrunk with the market. Her share was $58,000.

Mrs. Lauinger has been three times a widow. Her first husband, Eugene Lewis, of Darlington road, died in the country's service during the war. Her second husband, Claude R. Wilson, president of the Continental Coal Company, died 10 years ago.

MRS. JELKE UPSETS TRIAL

Quits Court for Nap Before Ordeal on Witness Stand

International News Service.

NEWPORT, R. I., May 23.—Mrs. Eugenia Woodward Jelke, former Dixie belle, upset proceedings in her cross-bill for divorce in Superior Court this afternoon by leaving the courtroom and going to bed at her hotel to fortify herself for the ordeal of going on the witness stand and revealing the secrets of her married life with her wealthy Wall street broker husband, F. Frazier Jelke.

Her lawyers, George Paul Slade and Morgan J. O'Brien, Jr., were called into the chambers of Judge Charles H. Walsh. Then, in a proceeding unique in the history of Rhode Island jurisprudence, the lawyers and the judge talked with Mrs. Jelke from her bed by telephone and had her conform with the law in waiving all rights concerning testimony given while she was not the courtroom. Judge Walsh told the lawyers they had no right to allow their client to leave the courtroom.

SLEUTH'S EVIDENCE

Before "Nini" returned to take the stand, the depositions of W. D. De Groat and Charles E. McCombs, two Birmingham (Ala.) detectives, were read in which they discredited the story of Havanah Bolden, former Negro maid in a Birmingham apartment house, in which, she had testified for Mr. Jelke, that Mrs. Jelke was a visitor with an unnamed southern "major."

Mrs. Jelke was sent to Union Memorial Hospital, Baltimore, October 6, 1931, a mental and physical wreck, according to Dr. Sydney R. Miller. Dr. Miller said that the hospital bills of Mrs. Jelke were paid for by Mrs. Oscar W. Underwood, wife of the late United States Senator from Alabama, uncle of "Nini."

PHYSICIAN TESTIFIES

The hospital head described the patient, three months in the institute, as weighing only 101 pounds, running a temperature, run down, generally fatigued, highly nervous and suffering from insomnia—all, according to the physician, "undoubtedly due" to her married life.

"Nini" told the doctor of alleged personal cruelty and personal violence by her wealthy 52-year-old husband, how she was the object of a constant barrage of complaints, how she felt as if she had been "beaten from head to foot" and how she had been put out of his Chicago apartment when she attempted a reconciliation and had no money and no place to go.

HOUSE POLL ASSURED ON SALES TAX

Job Bill Emerges as Major Revenue Measure

WASHINGTON, May 23.—(AP.)—House Democratic leaders today decided to bring the administration's public works-industrial-taxation bill up for consideration Thursday and to a vote Friday.

Six hours of debate is to be allowed. Also permitted will be one motion to substitute a general manufacturers' sale tax.

This is to give the House an opportunity to go on record on this form of taxation as against the numerous excise levies and the increases in income taxes imposed in the measure.

Chairman Doughton, of the Ways and Means Committee, who made the announcement of the plans, said he would seek a conference with Senator Harrison (Dem.), of Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee, on the gasoline tax-postage reduction bill deadlocked in conference over amendments to the electricity levies.

MAJOR TAX BILL

The bill emerged from committee startingly converted into a major tax bill to extend for an extra year all special excises imposed a year ago when the Treasury was fast running empty.

This extraordinary procedure, decided upon in the late night hours just before the Ways and Means committee approved the whole bill and voted unanimously to report it today was announced as an extra safeguard to Treasury Credit, and as double insurance for the $3,300,000,000 issue of bonds the measure calls for. Budget Director Lewis W. Douglas, Treasury spokesman, asked the step be taken.

FINAL PROVISIONS

As a result the bill now calls for:

Construction of public works, federal, state, local, and public-benefitting private building, financed by bond issue, designed to employ millions of men.

Self-regulation of all industry under federal supervision to end over-production, sweatshop wages, unduly long work hours, and thus increase prices and re-create employment.

New high income taxes, taxes on corporate dividends, increased gasoline tax, all to produce $221,000,000 a year to fund the public works bonds.

Extension from July 1, 1934, to June 30, 1935, of a round half billion dollars' worth of excise taxes on such articles as automobiles, radios, refrigerators, sporting goods, matches, candy, chewing gum, soft drinks, cosmetics, furs, jewelry, checks, safe deposit boxes, oil pipe lines, theater admissions, yachts, bonds and stocks.

The Simple Solution of A Serious Situation

THE Democrats are facing a critical situation in their tax problem.

Increased income taxes would not only impose excessive burdens on a community already staggering under the heavy load of adversity, but they would further reduce the purchasing power of the masses, and so hamper industry and retard return of prosperity.

Increased income taxes would offset much of the laborious building up of conditions to create prosperity which the Democratic party has done, and would be a severe handicap to the success of the party throughout the nation.

An additional tax on the cash incomes of corporations would also be a great financial and political error.

It would be a blight on business at a time when business needs stimulation, encouragement and active aid.

The gasoline tax would, perhaps, be the least objectionable of these offensive and injurious taxes.

BUT WHY consider any of them when it is so plainly obvious that what the situation definitely requires is a widespread excise tax—a painless tax like the manufacturers' sales tax.

Tariff taxation is a sales tax.

These are taxes which taxpayers hardly feel at all.

In Canada, where the sales tax has been in operation for years, the phrase "painless tax" in regard to the sales tax originated.

Canada calls it a painless tax, although the tax there is four per cent.

There would be no dangerous experiment, no disconcerting policy for the United States to have a similar percentage of sales taxation.

The American public pays a fifty per cent average tariff tax, which is a sales tax.

Why will they not cheerfully pay a four or five per cent manufacturers' sales tax?

Business wants the sales tax.

Labor wants the sales tax.

The community as a whole wants a sales tax.

Here are industry generally and the public asking for the sales tax, and the government needing the money, but Congress with its usual obtuseness proposing instead various oppressive and harmful taxes which will hamstring business and hinder the return of prosperity.

WHY DOES the Democratic party insist upon being impractical?

Why does it again want to prove to the public that it does not know how to handle the business of the nation?

Someone has said that the Democratic party has all the heart and the Republican party all the brains.

Why cannot the Democrats have brains as well as heart?

They are confronted with a serious situation to be sure, but the solution is simple.

All that the Congress has to do is to pass an adequate sales tax, and they will be freed from further confusion and complication.

The government will have ample funds to carry out its benevolent plans.

The public will be satisfied with the taxation and benefited by the government's policies.

And Congress—well, Congress will in all probability regain much of the respect and esteem of the community which it of late, by its obstinacy and perversity, has largely lost.

BANKER BALKS DEMAND FOR INFORMATION ON PARTNERSHIPS

WASHINGTON, May 23.—(AP.)—Already deep in the Morgan secrets, and quarreling itself over differences dealing with Morgan income tax returns, the Senate committee investigating the internationally-known banking house decided today to ask for its partnership agreement and the division of responsibilities and profits.

In an executive session, forced by dispute between Senators over questions thrust at J. P. Morgan about income taxes, this course was taken.

Counsel for the elderly financier had objected to furnishing the information sought; and protested as well when Mr. Morgan had been questioned repeatedly as to a deduction of over $21,000,000 claimed on an income tax return for the two days of January 1 and 2, 1931.

Morgan had defended the business of his firm and replied quietly to many questions bringing to light the long deep secrets of the business which he said had assets of almost $500,000,000.

But when he testified that he knew nothing of tax matters which the committee counsel—Ferdinand Pecora—insisted on asking, dispute replaced peace. The huge committee room tingled, as the crowd there pressed forward eagerly to hear every word.

GLASS OBJECTS

Senator Glass (Dem.), of Virginia, reminded the committee counsel that Morgan had said he knew nothing about the questions brought up, but Pecora went on.

Senator Couzens (Rep.), of Michigan, joined in the argument; and before the audience knew it, the hearing was adjourned so the committee could argue it out in closed meeting.

Glass had protested that the bureau of internal revenue had fully examined the Morgan returns, intimating it was not necessary for the committee to go into it.

Couzens heatedly observed they had also examined the returns of Charles E. Hitchell, former chairman of the National City Bank, now on trial for income tax eva-

Morgan Boldly Facing Probers Recalls Medici

By EDWIN C. HILL
International News Service Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON, May 23.—J. P. Morgan sallied out of the Hotel Carlton here this morning with banners flying, prepared to defend himself before the United States Senate Banking Committee.

He strode forth like a general going into battle, followed by his imposing staff of counsel and the principal officers of the house of Morgan—the pontifical John W. Davis, Partners Lamont and Cochran, and flanked by guards and clerks bearing the artillery and sidearms which will be used in the coming engagement—a truckload of books and documents.

There was something distinctly regal about the emergence of the world's greatest banker from his night's seclusion in the Carlton.

Outwardly calm and smiling, superficially unruffled, the big, broad-shouldered, gray-haired J. P., bore himself with the air and carriage of Lorenzo the Magnificent, with something of medieval assurance in the pride of his name and the prestige of his house.

There has always been a fasci-

Pirates Seek Revenge on Dodgers

FORBES FIELD, May 23.—With Steve Swetonic primed for slab action, the Pirates this afternoon were eager to repay in kind the trimming the Brooklyn Dodgers administered to the league leaders in their first battle yesterday afternoon. Bill Clark, clever southpaw, handed the Buccos their second shutout defeat of the year, the score being 3-0.

Manager Max Carey had another lefthander available for slab duty today. Joe Shaute, former Cleveland pitcher, was ready to twirl for the Dodgers. Carey had Owen Carroll in reserve. The series will be finished tomorrow, the New York Giants to make their debut here Thursday, which is Ladies' Day.

3 Vandergrift Tin Workers Injured

One workman was in a critical condition in Presbyterian Hospital today and two others are receiving treatment for burns received when a soaking tank collapsed yesterday in the Vandergrift plant of the American Sheet and Tin Plate Company.

The men were burned by hot metal. John Adamik, 50, of 245 North Vandergrift, father of nine children, received burns which covered more than one-third of his body. The othere burned were Nick Jamis, 49, of Eight street, Vandergrift, and Adam Budznik, 47, of East Vandergrift.

Stackpole to Head Militia Brigade

HARRISBURG, May 23.—Adj. Gen. David J. Davis today announced the promotion of Col. E. J. Stackpole, Jr., Harrisburg, to be commander of the 52nd Cavalry Brigade, Pennsylvania National Guard, with the rank of brigadier general.

He succeeds Lieut. Gov. E. C. Shannon, who recently was advanced to major general in command of the 28th Division.

Hariman Leaves Nassau Hospital

MINEOLA, N. Y., May 23.—(AP.)—Joseph W. Harriman, indicted banker, who attempted to stab himself to death in a hotel here, when he was found 24 hours after he walked away from a New York nursing home, was discharged from the Nassau County Hospital today.

A private ambulance was called to take him back to the nursing home.

First Big Cargo Of German Beer Arrives Here

What is probably the first large shipment of foreign beer is gurgling down Pittsburgh throats today, according to Walter H. Mennigke, distributor of a famous German beer in this district.

The beer, a consignment of 50 barrels, was put in the cold storage rooms of the Union Storage Company after a trip from New York yesterday. Known as Saar Basin beer, it was shipped to Pittsburgh from Walsheim, Bavaria. It retails for 25 cents a glass and 50 cents a bottle.

Crowd of Pupils Saved From Runaway Horses

Leaping at the head of one of a team of runaway horses, Patrolman James Enright brought them to a standstill today a few feet from a file of frightened school children at Hale and Bennett streets.

Enright, who directs traffic at the corner, had a few seconds warning from a motorist. He turned and ran up Bennett street aabout 50 feet to meet the horses, coming at a fast gait.

It was a white team hitched to a city dump cart and there were no reins. He jumped and caught one horse by the nose and dragged both to a standstill about 15 feet from thec rossing, witnesses said.

All Enright said was:

"Thank God."

Children from the Bennett street school and the Mother of Good Council Italian Parochial School who were crossing the street at the noon hour were in a panic. The team had run three squares without a driver.

Police Hint Suicide Of Missing Cadet

WEST POINT, N. Y., May 23.—(AP.)—Army officials announced today that Cadet John S. Conner, who disappeared yesterday from the Military Academy, had left a note "stating he was going absent without leave," but they declined to discuss police information that the note indicated suicidal intent.

The search for Conner, who was to have graduated with honors in a few days, was discontinued today.

Rare Brandy for Fair Seized by U.S. Agents

NEW YORK, May 23.—(INS.)—A bottle of brandy, 216 years old, was brought here today on the French liner Ile de France for exhibition at the Chicago World Fair—and customs officials seized it.

It may yet be exhibited, however, as the Prohibition Department will pass on its owner's claims that it is an antique and its importation does not violate the liquor laws.

Reed Firm Defends Fees In Income Tax Cases

A resolution offered by Representative McFadden in the House of Representatives to scan tax cases in which Senator David A. Reed's colleagues figured caused general discussion here today as partners in Reed, Smith, Shaw and McClay denied the firm shared the profits of Smith, Shaw, McClay and Seifert in any way.

McFadden's resolution would have the treasury furnish a list of "clients for whom the firm of Smith, Shaw and McClay and that the firm of Reed, Smith Shaw and McClay have appeared before the treasury or the bureau of internal affairs in connection with the settlement or other adjustments" of income tax payments since 1920.

The resolution, introduced without comment by McFadden marked a continuance of his attacks on the Mellon family and its many interests.

It was interpreted as an effort t

U. S. Also Wins Over 'Big 5' to Own Plan Of Geneva Debate

By FREDRIC K. ABBOTT
International News Service.

GENEVA, May 23.—Germany, carrying out Chancellor Hitler's recently announced conciliatory policy, today withdrew amendments to the British arms proposal which had threatened to wreck the international disarmament conference.

Dr. Rudolph Nadolny, chief German delegate, announced at a meeting of the general commission that the Reich would no longer insist upon amendments to Articles 19, 20 and 21 of the British proposals, embodying demands for a quantitative limit on heavy land guns, as well as on their caliber, and also withdrew Germany's demand for total abolition of tanks.

This announcement, regarded as the first fruits of President Roosevelt's disarmament appeal to the world, followed another American victory when representatives of the big five powers agreed to proceed to immediate discussion of arms limitation, sending the French demand for security to the political committee, meeting privately.

Arthur Henderson, presiding, applauded the German announcement and admonished other powers to "follow this splendid example."

LONDON IN ACCORD

LONDON, May 23.—(INS.)—Expressing conviction it would lead to favorable results at Geneva and the world economic conference, Great Britain today dispatched a favorable reply to President Roosevelt's peace and disarmament message. The reply said:

"The government entirely shares the President's view that on the success of these conferences hang the future happiness and prosperity of the world."

Britain declared itself especially encouraged by Mr. Roosevelt's indorsement of the MacDonald disarmament plan, which was taken as an indication of America's intention "to collaborate at Geneva in pressing for general adoption of the draft convention as a whole."

If this can be accomplished, the reply stated, the British government believes confidence can be restored between nations in preparation for the world economic conference.

FRANCE BALKING

PARIS, May 23.—(INS.)—Despite optimistic statements in government quarters, International News Service was informed in diplomatic circles today that France is still a "long way" from signing Premier Mussolini's four-power peace pact.

The French cabinet, it was reported, is hopelessly deadlocked on the proposal.

Foreign Minister Joseph Paul-Boncour, the French delegate at the disarmament conference, is said to be most anxious to co-operate with the United States and Britain at Geneva, but is hampered by failure of the cabinet to give him full authority.

DUCE HOPEFUL

ROME, May 23.—(INS.)—Declaring the "general atmosphere of Europe is distinctly better following President Roosevelt's message and Chancellor Hitler's speech," Premier Mussolini told the Fascist Grand Council today that success of his four-power peace plan is "imminent."

U. S. ECONOMIC MENTOR PICKED

WASHINGTON, May 23.—(INS.)—In a move which may mean American leadership in world currency stabilization, Prof. O. H. W. Sprague, financial adviser to the Bank of England, has been selected by President Roosevelt as economic adviser to this government.

Announcement of the appointment was anticipated today. According to understanding the selection of Sprague was agreed upon at a conference between the President and Secretary Woodin, Sprague, Gov. Eugene R. Black, of the Federal Reserve Board, and Under-Secretary of the Treasury Dean Acheson.

Following that meeting Woodin said an important announcement would be made shortly.

Sprague, an American, born in Massachusetts in 1873, holds a M. and Ph. D. degrees from Harvard, where he was once a professor in banking and currency. Regarded as one of the world's foremost authorities on international exchange, he has been connected with the Bank of England several years.

BANK GUARANTY APPROVAL NEAR

WASHINGTON, May 23.—(INS.)—The Steagall bill launching the American banking system on a nation-wide system of bank deposit insurance was slated to pass the House today.

Administration leaders were driving the House at top speed to complete passage, so that the industrial recovery bill can be given right of way.

Despite many controversial amendments Chairman Steagall (Dem.), of Alabama, of the Banking Committee was confident of approval of the bill. It will then go to the Senate where the similar Glass bill is under consideration.

Efforts to write a provision into the bank reform sections of the bill limiting the salaries of officers of the Federal Reserve system to $15,000 a year failed.

PEIPING, May 23.—Japanese troops occupied Peiping, ancient capital of China, today.

Chinese residents were terrified as the invading forces marched through the streets while Nanking defense troops fled south.

At the same time, 600 Japanese troops from Tientsin commanded by Maj. Miyasaki occupied Peiping for the purpose of protecting Japanese residents and strengthening the Japanese legation garrison.

The action of the Japanese troops placed the Peiping area, where many American citizens reside, under virtual control—for the time being at least—of Japanese military authorities.

Maj. Miyasaki, commanding the detachment from Tientsin, told International News Service:

"My purpose in bringing these troops into Peiping is to keep the peace."

Sir Miles Lampson and Nelson T. Johnson, the British and American ministers to China, conferred on the situation. It was understood they agreed to watch further developments before taking drastic action.

SHANGHAI, May 23.—(INS.)—A temporary peace arrangement between the Japanese and Chinese forces was reached at Peiping today.

CIRCUS FOUGHT IN AMBRIDGE

Alleged borough politics today caused a ruling to be sought from United States Attorney Louis Graham by Postmaster Samuel M. Lambie, of Ambridge, to prevent a circus from showing tomorrow on a government-owned postoffice site.

Burgess P. J. Caul said the move was caused by the local political situation. Caul issued a permit to the Bennett Bros. Circus to show in Ambridge. The permit, Caul said, grants use of borough property adjoining the postoffice site.

Gen. Sheridan's Old Drummer Boy Dies

FORT COLLINS, Col., May 23.—(AP.)—Ninety-year-old Rudolph Breniman, to whom dashing Gen. Philip Sheridan gave the command, "Beat the long roll, boy, we're going back," is dead.

Press Denounces Higher Income Tax; Sales Levy Urged as Common Sense

Injustice and Worse

If it were not singularly unfair to put a further burden on the tiny minority of citizens who pay federal income taxes it would still be in line with an excessively stupid fiscal policy. Yet the proposal to do just this thing seems to be gaining favor among members of the Ways and Means Committee of the House as a method of raising the money to "service" the prospective expenditure on public works.

Faced with the alternative of levying a manufactures sales tax, stanchly advocated by business and to which labor is now receptive, they are apparently sticking to their traditional preference for "soaking the rich."

The rich meanwhile, have long since vanished or taken cover in tax-exempt securities, and the policy has amply demonstrated its unsoundness in the discouragement of private enterprise and the impoverishment of the government.

The public works program in the pending "recovery" bill calls for an outlay of $3,300,000,000. To meet the interest and amortization charges on this huge sum will require additional revenue of $220,000,000 a year. The entire yield to the Treasury from individual income taxes was, in 1932, only $250,000,000.

This year with lower exemptions and with normal tax rates, on the average, more than doubled, the return will be between $375,000,000 and $400,000,000. Imagine bleeding this source to the tune of $220,000,000 more!

However, that is not the proposition. Even Congressman appear to recognize that in the matter of income taxes the law of diminishing returns has set in with a vengeance. By jacking up normal rates a third above their present level they foresee an additional revenue of only $46,000,000.

To make up the difference they are flirting with the notion of extending the same rates to stock dividends, thus almost doubling the already high tax on corporate incomes, and of adding three-quarters of a cent to the gasoline tax.

Compare this assortment of levies on sources already groaning under the weight not only of federal but of state taxation with a low manufactures sales tax. The latter, of itself could be made to raise all the money required, and its breadth of base would be such that the individual would not be conscious of it.

The Ways and Means Committee must make its choice today or the President will send in his own recommendations. It is rumored that he prefers the sales tax, notwithstanding his former opposition to it on principle.

Why, then did he not incorporate his preference in the recovery bill itself or in his message transmitting it? It is a thousand pities that for the sake of side-stepping a charge of inconsistency he should encouraged a weak-kneed committee to consult its fears.

The New York Evening Post has the following to say about the sales tax in its editorial columns yesterday:

Why Not the Sales Tax?

We do not know what the Ways and Means Committee of the House of Representatives is going to do today by way of a choice of a method of taxation to meet the annual $220,000,000 interest and amortization charges on the administration's proposed "public building program" of $3,300,000,000.

But we do hope that the committee is not going to try to get it out of that comparatively small group of Americans who pay income taxes. The payers of income tax have had increased burdens placed upon their shoulders by both state and federal governments until now they are, in many cases, simply unable to meet the charge.

The government cannot get anything like $220,000,000 from this exhausted source. Why in the name of common sense it doesn't proceed directly to the sales tax we cannot see. The President should step in and demand it. He should not permit Speaker Rainey to get away with that Congressional parrot cry of the Hoover regime, "the sales tax can never pass the House."

50,000 Speakeasies Closed by 3.2 Beer

SAN FRANCISCO, May 23.—(AP.)—Maj. A. V. Dalrympre, national prohibition director, here on a tour of inspection, said yesterday that at least 50,000 speakeasies in the United States have been driven out of business by enactment of the new beer laws.

Legal beer has forced at least 10,000 resorts out of business in New York and as many more in Chicago, he said.

STATE APPEALS BANK DECISION

HARRISBURG, May 23.—(AP.)—The Supreme Court must determine whether a bonding company which insured state funds deposited in banks may cancel its surety bonds.

Harold D. Saylor, deputy attorney general, today had told the court the Globe Indemnity Company canceled its bond insuring $200,000 of state money in the Diamond National Bank of Pittsburgh on June 10, 1932, and that the bank closed November 14.

Saylor contended that the company should be required to make good on the state's deposit in that bank.

The case is an appeal of the state from the decision of the Dauphin County Court, which ruled the company could cancel its bond.

Boy, 16, Gets Life For Slaying Father

COLFAX, Wash., May 23.—(AP.)—Ernest Kirkland, 16-year-old farm boy, today had been informed by a Superior Court jury he must spend the rest of his life in the penitentiary for the slaying of a father whom he believed to be too strict.

The boy's mother held Ernest's hands through most of the trial, and wept while the evidence was being introduced against him.

WAY CLEARED FOR MOONEY TRIAL TODAY

Case Set to Open After Supreme Court Rules Out Final Obstacle

SAN FRANCISCO, May 23.—(AP.)—The trial of Thomas J. Mooney on a long-dormant indictment growing out of the Preparedness Day bombing here in 1916 gets under way in Superior Court today.

The last obstacle to the trial was removed late yesterday when the State Supreme Court denied the petition of Attorney John O'Gara for a writ of mandate to compel Superior Judge Louis Ward to dismiss the indictment.

WAY CLEARED

With the way cleared for the opening of the trial at 10 a. m. today, the defense moved to present Mooney's story, which the veteran labor leader hopes will clear him of complicity in the bomb outrage. With the old indictment out of the way, the defense hopes to be able to obtain a pardon for Mooney or move for his freedom through other legal channels.

The state has announced it will not present a case against Mooney. William W. Murphy, assistant district attorney in charge of the Mooney case, has announced he will inform the court the state has no evidence to offer.

The state then might move for a directed verdict of not guilty. This is the only verdict possible, attorneys said, in the absence of prosecution evidence. Judge Ward has stated that he probably would grant such a motion should it be made.

MOONEY SEEKS STAND

Such procedure, however, would deprive Mooney of an opportunity to take the stand and proclaim his innocence. Every step of the preliminaries to date has been directed toward the goal of getting Mooney on the stand where he can offer his defense.

Judge Ward yesterday indicated he is disposed to allow a certain amount of defense testimony, but that he will not permit a long drawn out trial.

HEIRESS THREAT BRINGS DENIAL

PARIS, May 23.—(INS.)—Denying his daughter had received threatening "crank" letters, Franklyn Hutton, New York millionaire and father of Barbara Hutton, engaged to marry Prince Mdivani June 20, left hurriedly for London today.

Reports that Miss Hutton had received threatening notes were published by a Paris newspaper today. She is known as America's wealthiest heiress. As he dashed from his suite, Hutton said:

"I am flying to London just to get some clothes there.

"Everything is now arranged about my daughter's marriage excepting the church and a few details.

"I do not know how the reports of the crank letters started. Barbara has not received any such letters."

Parents Grieve for Girl Seeing 'Bright Lights'

A sorrowing family eager to protect her from the pitfalls of night life and bright lights waits for her in Pittsburgh. But she pays no heed—the thrill of freedom in a strange city holds her fast.

Anna left her home at 155 Pearl street last Tuesday. She wanted to get into the movies—she was tired of the school of the Immaculate Conception and her playmates there. She was tired of waiting to grow up.

So she and Raphaelina D'Ortenzia, 15, of the rear of 4737 Lorrigan street, went to Buffalo to look for night club jobs. Raphaelina had some money.

Last week Anna wrote twice. The first letter said they had night club jobs at $8 a week, but hadn't yet been paid and hadn't eaten in two days. A second letter said they'd been paid, were now getting $10 a week. She wrote:

"Don't worry, Daddy—we have plenty of money and jobs."

Papa DelRaso went to Buffalo Sunday to hunt Anna. She and Raphaelina had checked out of their hotel two hours before he arrived.

Back home, he says his little girl can see life, if she'll only tell him where she is. Until then, there can be no peace in the family.

Ruth Owen in Denmark Cheered by People

COPENHAGEN, Denmark, May 23.—(AP.)—America's first woman minister, Mrs. Ruth Bryan Owen, received cordial greetings as she arrived today to assume her post.

On behalf of the Danish government, Count Carl Moltke, former Danish minister to Washington, welcomed her to Denmark.

She was greatly pleased at the thought of taking over the new post she said before landing, adding:

"My particular job will be to attempt to relieve economic relations between America and Denmark and get back a normal adjustment to reduce barriers keeping Danish goods from America and American goods from Denmark.

"I shall try to make relations much more intimate—no two people are so akin in outlook thought and sentiment. We even have the same sense of humor."

Arrests Followed Raid Routing 100 From Downtown Cabaret

None of the officers who arrested three men and a woman and dispersed 100 at the New Plantation Club, at 340 Third avenue, early today appeared at the hearing in Central Station.

Magistrate Rothenberg discharged the four prisoners, arrested following a free-for-all fight.

Patrolman Harry Levine, accredited with the arrest, testified that the prisoners were in the auto patrol when he arrived and he knew nothing of the fight.

The arrests occurred at the annual banquet of the bowling team sponsored by Alderman P. F. Reilly, of the Seventeenth Ward, it was reported.

The prisoners were registered as Daniel George, 71 South Fifteenth street; John Block, 1710 Carson street; Samuel Manula, 1712 Carson street, and Agnes Gordon, 1712 Carson street. They were charged with disorderly conduct.

At today's arraignment, Levine said he understood Lieut. Albert Florig and a couple of officers had made the arrests.

George was treated at Allegheny General Hospital for head injuries.

The four were taken into custody outside the club, police said.

When police entered the club, Oscar (Boots) Kleinzing, said to be a deputy constable of the Seventeenth Ward, complained to police that he had been slugged. He was hustled off to a patrol wagon, but there is no record of his arrest.

Police said they found no evidence of any shooting.

Early yesterday morning Clyde Vickers, 27, of 322 Penn avenue, master of ceremonies at the club, was beaten up by four men. Vickers was attacked, police said, because he offered to help four women who wanted to go home despite their escorts' objections.

Several weeks ago, when the club was known as the Cotton Club, a free-for-all fight resulted in the closing of the resort. The quarrel involved the management and musicians over salaries.

SEEK TO PROVE 'EXTORTION' IN BALM SUIT

Witnesses for Judge Testify to Seeing Couple Together

Testimony intended to buttress the defense contention of an "extortion scheme" was offered today in the trial of Judge Elder W. Marshall, defendant in a suit for alienation of affections.

Thomas McMinn, who formerly resided in McClure avenue, Swissvale, is the plaintiff. He avers that Judge Marshall caused an estrangement between him and his wife, Mrs. Myrtle Irene McMinn.

SEEN TOGETHER

Witnesses called by Attorney Oliver K. Eaton, for the defense, testified to having seen McMinn and his wife together at home and elsewhere after their alleged separation, February 9, 1929. On that date, the plaintiff avers, he found Judge Marshall with Mrs. McMinn in the McMinn home.

Harry N. Kilman, Jr., Baltimore investigator, testified to having seen McMinn at home in March and April, 1929, and to having observed Mrs. McMinn pick up her husband in her automobile and drive to secluded places on numerous occasions subsequent to their alleged estrangement.

Capt. John McFarland, of East End Police Station, testified that on April 7, 1929, Mrs. McMinn had posted a forfeit at the station for her husband following his arrest on a charge of speeding. She gave a check, he said.

TESTIFIES FOR JUDGE

Attorney James H. Duff, former law partner of Judge Marshall, testified Mrs. McMinn had come to his office March 21, 1929, asking for aid in a reconciliation with her husband, saying she didn't know where he was.

On the same night, Attorney Allen H. Kerr testified he had seen McMinn and his wife together near the West Penn Hospital.

McMinn, who is acting as his own attorney, brought out on cross-examination that eight investigators, including Police Supt. Franklin T. McQuaide, then in charge of a private detective agency, and his brother, Harry T. McQuaide, had been employed in trailing McMinn and his wife. The case is being heard before Visiting Judge Donald P. McPherson, of Adams County.

SELECT COYNE DEATH TRIAL JURY

Father Expected to Testify Against Son In Bride Slaying

Slow progress was being made today in selecting a jury to try John Coyne, Jr., 25, for the murder of his father's bride, Mrs. Irene Carbert Coyne.

The 19-year-old step-mother was shot to death in the Coyne home at 3424½ Ward street, Hazelwood, in the midst of a wedding celebration on the night of February 2.

MAY TAKE DAY

The selection of a jury today in Criminal Court was being conducted with great deliberation and there are indications it may require the entire day.

The case is being heard before Judge Norman T. Boose, of Somerset County. Attorney Charles J. Margiotti represents the defendant and Assistant District Attorney D. Meredith Reid is the prosecutor.

The youth is accused of shooting Mrs. Coyne and attacking his father with a hammer, after he flew here from Detroit in an effort to prevent the wedding.

SLAIN AT WEDDING

According to police, he arrived home while the wedding festivities were in progress, went to the cellar, got a rifle and shot the bride through the chest. She died almost instantly.

The father is expected to be a witness against his son in the trial, as he testified before the coroner that the boy attacked him with a hammer.

The killing resulted, according to police, because of the younger Coyne's belief that the girl was marrying his father for his property.

'WAXEY' GORDON AWAITS BAIL

NEW YORK, May 23.—(INS.)—Having had his brief day in court, Irving Wexler, better known as "Waxey" Gordon, United States public enemy No. 1, had a day in jail today while waiting for someone to secure $100,000 bail to guarantee his appearance for trial.

He is under indictment by a Federal Grand Jury charged with failure to pay income taxes totaling more than $380,000 for the years 1930 and 1931, on income reported from the sale of illicit beer. His trial is scheduled for June 5.

Detectives were not so sure the reputed gang leader desires to be free on bail. He feels much safer in jail, they asserted, as he feels that, if freed, he might become the target of some gunning gangster, emboldened by the fact that the once all-powerful gang czar has fallen from his former high estate to the extent that he is now in the toils of the law.

PRIEST IN SIEGE TRIES ESCAPE

PHILADELPHIA, May 23.—(AP.)—An Augustinian priest who has been held "prisoner" for three weeks by parishioners protesting the transfer of Our Lady of Good Counsel Church to the Archdiocese of Philadelphia, made an unsuccessful effort to leave the church today.

Two of his four guards, appointed by the protest committee which is holding the church against diocesan authorities, escorted the Rev. Simpliciano Gatt "politely but firmly" back to his quarters, which he had left, carrying his belongings in a suitcase.

It was those belongings which led to his "capture" in the first place, for, after the transfer order had been issued three weeks ago, he left when parisihoners started a demonstration, but returned later for his clothes and has been "detained" since.

JUNE ENGAGED --IF MAX WINS

NEW YORK, May 23.—(INS.)—When Max Baer starts throwing punches at Max Schmeling in the Yankee Stadium the night of June 8, the Jewish lad will have an even greater incentive than his oft-expressed desire to beat a German and get a shot at the heavyweight title and the million that goes with it.

For Baer will be fighting for the love and the hand of beautiful June Knight, ingenue of a Broadway musical hit. Needless to say, Max will take any chance to win the golden-haired, blue-eyed, svelte little beauty whose gurgling laugh and cooing voice are the talk of the town.

The gorgeous June admitted her engagement to Baer last night. Sitting in her dressing room in the Apollo Theater while she made up for the performance, she said she had promised to marry Max if he won the heavyweight title, adding:

"He's the most wonderful boy in the world. I'm simply mad about him. He's really adorable and sweet. They tell me he's a wild man in the ring, but I only know him outside the ring and then he's as kind and gentle as a baby."

Troops Called Out In Textile Strike

MANCHESTER, N. H., May 23.—(INS.)—Four companies of New Hampshire National Guardsmen patrolled the mill district of Manchester today, to guard against further violence in the strikes of more than 10,000 workers.

The guardsmen were summoned last night by Adj. Gen. George Morrill after 5,000 textile strikers and their sympathizers stormed the Amoskeag mill.

Local police dispersed the crowd and arrested two persons.

Today

until men with brains became dissatisfied.

CROWDS HOWLED around the guillotine, but it took men like Mirabeau, Danton, Robespierre, Marat, Desmoulins, and the long line of thinkers that led up to them, Rousseau, d'Alembert, Voltaire and the others to produce a revolution.

Also it required a particularly stupid king, Louis Sixteenth, to make it complete.

Napoleon, then a young lieutenant in Paris, looking on, if given power, might have put an end to that revolution in twenty-four hours.

AND BESIDES, the United States doesn't WANT a revolution. It wants to finish paying for its house and lot, wants a new automobile in place of the old one, better radio, latest model washing machine, plenty of moving picture tickets, almost everything EXCEPT revolution.

TEMPORARILY Japanese-Chinese fighting has ceased. It is expected that China and Japan will compromise their troubles, presumably by letting Japan have what she wants.

In Peiping, "Forbidden City," the main danger is not Japan, but Chinese soldiers, that flee from the Japanese, seize houses and palaces, make themselves at home.

Japanese airplanes inspire terror and there is talk of imitating the Russians, who, in Moscow, ended Napoleon's occupation with fire. Chinese cities may prefer destruction to bombardment.

Bishop John O'Hern Dies in Rochester

ROCHESTER, N. Y., May 23.—(AP.)—Bishop John Francis O'Hern, of the Catholic Diocese of Rochester, died suddenly last night at the episcopal residence. He had been confined to bed since Saturday with a recurrence of a heart ailment which he suffered last winter.

He became the third bishop of the Rochester Diocese in the spring of 1929 folowing the retirement of Bishop Thomas F. Hickey, who is still living.

Laemmle's Nephew Jailed as Speeder

LOS ANGELES, May 23.—(AP.)—Ernest Laemmle, film director, was sentenced to 15 days in jail after he had pleaded guilty in Municipal Court yesterday to seven traffic complaints, ranging from speeding to disregard of boulevard stops.

CONCEDE WET VICTORY IN N. Y.

ALBANY, N. Y., May 23.—(AP.)—With a sweeping wet victory conceded in advance by dry leaders, New Yorkers voted today for 150 delegates to the state prohibition repeal convention which will be held in Albany June 27.

Although last minute appeals were expected to bring out some additional votes on both sides, an unusually light vote was predicted.

New York is the sixth state to register an attitude toward the repeal of the Eighteenth Amendment. The other five states—Michigan, New Jersey, Rhode Island, Wisconsin and Wyoming—were recorded as overwhelmingly for repeal.

Mary Pickford Takes Train for New York

LOS ANGELES, May 23.—(AP.)—Mary Pickford left for New York by train last night on a business trip. The film star expects to make part of the journey by airplane.

BINGHAM CALLS ON KING GEORGE

LONDON, May 23.—(AP.)—Robert W. Bingham, new United States Ambassador, riding behind prancing King's horses in an open royal carriage, went to Buckingham Palace this morning, officially met King George and presented his credentials.

Ray Atherton, embassy counsellor, and chiefs of the embassy departments accompanied the Ambassador.

The King, on account of an attack of rheumatism in one arm, still was unable to wear a uniform, and his majesty, Mr. Bingham and the other members of the party were dressed in formal morning clothes.

After the formal presentation, the King and the Ambassador chatted in the most friendly terms.

Injured Avoiding Bee, Man Sues Tube City

Stepping out of the way of a bee, John Maha fell into a cellar at Mulberry avenue and Fourth street, McKeesport, near where he lived. He has entered suit for $5,000 damages against the City of McKeesport for personal injuries.

According to Maha, there were doors for the cellar way in the sidewalk and these were open. Maha was injured about the body, according to his statement of claim filed by Attorney R. A. Hitchens. It is claimed that the property was not properly guarded.

CHILD, 5, FALLS FROM ROOF

Falling from the roof of a three-story building, where she was playing with another child, Ruth Hadberg, 5, of 603 Eighth avenue, Homestead, is being treated at her home for severe cuts and bruises.

She fell from the Jaffe Building, 333 Eighth avenue, late yesterday.

A fire escape which the child struck at the second floor level broke her fall. She was picked up in an unconscious condition and taken to her home, where seven stitches were required to close a cut in her head.

NUDIST COLONY UNDER BAN

RIVERSIDE, Cal., May 23.—(AP.)—A notice that no nudist colony will be permitted to exist in Riverside County was served today on Hobart Glassey, promoter of "Elysian Fields," by District Attorney Earl Redwine. Glassey informed officers:

"We are not operating a nudist colony, but a secluded vacation center where people may go naked. There is a distinction."

Redwine countered:

"If there's a distinction it's too fine for my legal mind. You can commune with nature all you want as long as you wear some clothes."

When Redwine and Sheriff Carl Rayburn visited "Elysian Fields" they found Glassey and his wife, Laura. Glassey, identified by officials as a Syracuse University graduate and former psychologist at Camp Olympia, a nudist colony at Highland, N. Y., said he had no intention of abandoning the colony. His wife, a former Highland (N. Y.) high school teacher, was indignant.

TROLLEY SUIT CONTINUED

ROCHESTER, Pa., May 23.—Rochester borough's battle with the Beaver Valley Traction Company was held in abeyance today as Judge Frank E. Reader continued the temporary injunction obtained by the traction company May 13. Date for a final hearing was not set.

Judge Reader, in his opinion, said the row of May 13, when the borough barricaded the right of way of the railways company, was only the sequel to a long series of differences. The court said the traction company had failed to do its duty in maintaining street repairs. He said the question involved was whether the borough officers had not exceeded their authority in blockading the company's right of way.

Hoovers Leave On Trip to Sierras

MRS. ROOSEVELT FLIES HOME

NEWARK, N. J., May 23.—(AP.)—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, wife of the President, and two members of her husband's cabinet, Secretary of the Treasury Woodin and Secretary of War Dern, left Newark Airport at 10:05 a. m. eastern standard time, for Washington.

Mrs. Roosevelt last night attended the May ball, marked by military and naval pomp and pageantry, which was for the benefit of the two lunch and rest rooms established by her for unemployed New York girls.

Mrs. Roosevelt arrived at the Armory about 11 o'clock from a dinner tendered her by Mrs. William Randolph Hearst.

Guests at the dinner given by Mrs. Hearst, who was chairman of the benefit, included Secretary of War George H. Dern; Postmaster General James A. Farley and Mrs. Farley; Mr. and Mrs. Vincent Astor; Mr. and Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt; Mayor John P. O'Brien and Mrs. O'Brien; former Ambassador James W. Gerard and Mrs. Gerard; Maj. Gen. Dennis E. Nolan and Mrs. Nolan; Maj. Gen. William D. Connor and Mrs. Connor; Maj. Gen. William N. Haskell and Mrs. Haskell.

DOCTOR, POLICE CLASH ON DEATH

If the skull of Peter Jones, 24, Negro, was fractured when he was first examined at Passavant Hospital Sunday, there was no evidence of such an injury, Dr. J. Ginsberg, the examining physician, said today.

Jones, found unconscious in Crawford street, was taken to the hospital, then to jail after examination. Later, in his cell, he was found bleeding from the nose. He died after being returned to the hospital.

Police Capt. John Schnurr said the hospital report that Jones was suffering from alcoholism was responsible for his being held in jail. Dr. Ginsberg replied that prisoners are never diagnosed as intoxicated at the hospital. He added that it was a possibility that Jones' skull was fractured after he had been examined in the hospital.

Won't Support Husband, Mother of Nine Jailed

PHILADELPHIA, May 23.—(AP.)—Mother of nine sons and daughters, Mrs. Mary Martin, at 60, today is the first woman in Philadelphia's Alimony Club.

She was sentenced to 30 days in prison by Judge Theodore Rosen in Domestic Relations Court yesterday after she told him she "could not and would not" pay $3 weekly to support her husband, Daniel, 68, a carpenter crippled in a fall.

The order, entered against the woman in October, 1931, holds that the husband, being physically unable to support himself, is entitled to assistance from his wife, inasmuch as she "has an income and holds title to real estate turned over to her by her husband."

She said she operates a boarding house, but declared no one had any money to pay her.

She declared she took in washing "to make both ends meet," but her husband's counsel said she had a "tidy sum" of money put away.

Two Men End Lives; One Hangs Self, Revived

Two men ended their lives last night and a third, who attempted to hang himself in his home, was revived by South Side police.

The body of Gottfried Walshott, 42, of 7807 Stanton avenue, Swissvale, a bullet in the right temple and revolver in hand, was found in the cellar of a garage at 7706 Edgewood avenue, Swissvale, according to a Coroner's report.

Walshott attempted to hang himself with a clothesline, but when it snapped he shot himself, Deputy Coroner Roy Addlesburger reported.

Members of Walshott's family said he had been in ill health for several years.

Jacob Abramovitz, 35, of 133 Crawford street, died last night in Passavant Hospital several hours after he had swallowed poison in his home, the Coroner's office reported. Police said he had attempted suicide several months ago.

Joseph Schneider, 81, found hanging from a clothes hook in the bathroom of his home, 1419 Fredell street, Carrick, was revived by Wagonmen Richard Challis and Thomas Fitzgerald, who worked with an inhalator more than three hours, they reported. He regained consciousness after six tanks of oxygen had been administered.

MORGAN QUIZ DISRUPTED OVER INCOME TAX QUESTIONING

sion as a result of previous testimony before the committee.

Pecora asserted that returns made by individual members of the firm had been accepted without examination by the income tax agents, referring to a return made for Mrs. M. W. Newbold, of Philadelphia.

Despite this dispute, no effort was made at the executive session following the public hearing to check the income tax inquiry.

The committee only voted to ask the firm for a copy of its partnership agreement, which John W. Davis—counsel for the banker—had questioned the committee's right to demand.

It was decided to ask for the agreement with the understanding a decision will be made later whether it will be made public.

Shooting rapid questions, Pecora asked Morgan:

"Do you know your firm made a return (income tax) for the two day period between January 1 and January 2, 1931?"

Morgan replied:

"Probably, but I don't know it."

"Do you know that in the income return for the two day period deduction of $21,071,000 were made?"

"I don't know."

"That is not an item of small consequence is it?"

"I really don't know anything about it."

"Do you know of any loss that occurred to the firm for that two days?"

Davis, as counsel for Morgan, hurriedly interrupted to say the question was "irrelvant" and Sen. Glass protested that Morgan had said he did not know about the income tax question.

MORGAN STATEMENT

Before Morgan's cross-examination by Pecora, the banker read to the investigating committee a statement defending the practice of private banking.

Pointing out that the private bankers risked their own money, Morgan said that they had greater freedom of action. He added, however:

"In the process of time there has grown up a code of professional ethics and customs, on the observance of which depend his reputation, his fortune and his usefulness to the community in which he works.

"Some private bankers, as indeed is the case in some of the other professions, are not as observant of this code as they should be; if, in the exercise of his profession, the private banker disregards this code, which could never be expressed in legislation, but has a force far greater than any law, he will sacrifice his credit.

"This credit is his most valuable possession; it is the result of years of fair and honorable dealing and, while it may be quickly lost, once lost cannot be restored for a long time, if ever."

TELLS OF OWN FIRM

Speaking of his own firm, Morgan said:

"If I may be permitted to speak of the firm, of which I have the honor to be the senior partner, I should state that at all times the idea of doing only first class business, and that in a first class way, has been before our minds.

"We have never been satisfied with simply keeping within the law, but have constantly sought so to act that we might fully observe the professional code, and so maintain the credit and reputation which has been handed down to us from our predecessors in the firm."

Morgan went on to defend the right of private bankers to sit on the directorate of industrial concerns and of other banks, and concluded his statement with this declaration:

"To sum up, I state without hesitation that I consider the private banker a national asset and not a national danger.

"As to the theory that he may become too powerful, it must be remembered that any power which he has comes, not from the possession of large means, but from the confidence of people in his character and credit, and that that power, having no force to back it, would disappear at once if people thought that the character had changed or the credit had diminished—not financial credit, but that which comes from the respect and esteem of the community."

STENOGRAPHERS SWORN

In an extraordinary procedure, Chairman Fletcher swore the official stenographers faithfully to transcribe Morgan's testimony.

The biggest crowd in the history of Senate investigations jammed the huge committee room in the Senate Office Building, and overflowed into surrounding corridors.

Senators' wives and social leaders occupied many of the seats in the audience.

Morgan Reveals Coffers Contain Quarter Billion

WASHINGTON, May 23.—(AP.)—More than a quarter of a billion dollars in cash and government securities alone is in the coffers of J. P. Morgan & Co., according to a statement submitted to the Senate committee today by J. P. Morgan.

The assets were listed as follows:

|---|---|
| Cash | $ 33,800,000 |
| Government securities | 224,000,000 |
| Call loans | 325,000 |
| State and municipal bonds | 6,745,299 |
| Corp. bonds and corp. stocks | 15,875,028 |
| Other investments | 810,920 |
| Time loans | 34,838,442 |
| Demand loans | 47,869,164 |
| Banking houses | 9,691,304 |
| Acceptances of other banks | Nothing |
| Accrued interest receivable | Nothing |
| Acceptances held under guarantee | Nothing |
| Customer, liability account acceptances | 11,397,271 |
| Foreign Exchange | 10,645,958 |

In addition to the $250,000,000 deposits, liabilities were listed as follows:

|---|---|
| New worth | $ 53,194,076 |
| Bills payable | None |
| Accrued interest payable | None |
| Acceptances sold under guarantee | 12,420,358 |
| Foreign exchange | 18,645,959 |

The statement, a consolidated balance sheet for both of New York and Philadelphia houses, showed deposits had reached a peak of $562,406,806 in 1927; other years were: 1928, $481,188,616; 1929, $492,292,666; 1930, $503,898,014; 1931, $319,403,848.

On last December 31, deposits were listed at $346,000,000.

PREACHER WED, HUNTS JOB

RANDOLPH, Ia., May 23.—(INS.)—Happy in a temporary home here with his 20-year-old co-ed bride for whom he left his Missouri church and family, the Rev. Sharon C. Inman, Presbyterian minister, laid plans today for finding employment.

Mr. Inman and his bride, formerly Miss Ezia Holdridge, were married last week in Oklahoma, they said. They journeyed here to the home of Inman's father, where they plan to stay until the minister can get work which, he said, will not be in the ministry.

Marriage of the couple climaxed a love triangle which received wide attention when it was revealed that Miss Holdridge was living in the Inman home with Mr. and Mrs. Inman and their two children. Mr. Inman resigned from his church at Cave Springs, Mo., when charges of conduct unbecoming a minister were filed against him.

Mrs. Inman has obtained a divorce and custody of the two children.

DECISION NEAR ON PARK STANDS

County Park Director A. M. Marion today was expected to report to the County Commissioners on his attempt to interest large stores in taking over concessions in county parks. If unable to interest large concerns, Marion was expected to recommend that the concessions be given to individuals.

For several weeks applicants have sought permission to open refreshment stands in the parks. Last week Edgar Collins and Ross Thomas began preparations to do business, but the Commissioners denied they had been given permits.

The question of beer sales in the parks also may be settled today. Commissioner W. D. Mansfield has declared he will vote to prohibit beer selling, as the parks are visited by church groups and children.

ARCTIC FLIER WEDS PA. GIRL

NEW YORK, May 23.—(INS.)—Lincoln Ellsworth, Arctic explorer, and Mary Louise Ulmer, of Pottsville, Pa., were married today in a quiet ceremony at the "Little Church Around the Corner."

The ceremony, originally scheduled to take place in Switzerland this spring, was performed by the Right Rev. William Scarlett, bishop of Missouri, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Randolph Day, rector of the church.

Miss Ulmer was given in marriage by her brother, Julian. Vernon S. Prentice, manager of the U. S. Davis Cup team and Ellsworth's brother-in-law, was groomsman.

Ellsworth, who flew over the North Pole with the Amundsen expedition in 1926, is planning a flight over the south polar regions this year, accompanied by Bernt Balchen, veteran oceanic flier.

King Job Hearing Set for Thursday

HARRISBURG, May 23.—(INS.)—Chief Justice Robert S. Fraser of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court today tentatively fixed Thursday of this week for arguments on the quo warranto proceedings instituted by the Attorney General, requiring Dr. Clyde L. King to establish his claim to the chairmanship of the Public Service Commission.

2,000 Pay Tribute To Woman Jurist

CHICAGO, May 23.—(AP.)—Two thousand persons, high in judicial and political affairs, paid tribute to Mary Bartelme, Cook County's only woman judge, who is going to retire June 5 after 12 years on the bench of the "world's largest juvenile court."

Liner Sets Record On Genoa-N. Y. Trip

NEW YORK, May 23.—(AP.)—Averaging 27.63 knots, and at times running at 28.25 knots, the Italian liner Conte di Savoia arrived here today in five days and 22 hours, establishing a record for the Mediterranean run from Genoa to New York.

Auto Injuries Fatal To Beaver Hotel Man

BEAVER, Pa., May 23.—Vincent Hanna, 56, former hotelkeeper, died today, the result of injuries suffered in an auto accident April 29.

J. C. Barcus, of East Liverpool, O., died in Rochester Hospital today from injuries suffered yesterday when his motorcycle collided with an automobile.

Pedestrian Killed By Auto on Highway

GREENSBURG, Pa., May 23.—John Bolinger, 27, of Hempfield Township, was killed on the Mt. Pleasant highway last night when struck by an auto. Police said he was struck by the machine of Martin Farrell, of Mt. Pleasant, when Farrell was blinded by the lights of another car.

MORGAN'S STATEMENT DEFENDING PRIVATE BANKS

WASHINGTON, May 23.—(INS.)—A summary of J. P. Morgan's statement defending private bankers follows:

"The private banker is a member of a profession which has been practiced since the middle ages. In the process of time there has grown up a code of professional ethics and customs, on the observance of which depend his reputation, his fortune and his usefulness to the community in which he works.

Some private bankers, as indeed is the case in some of the other professions, are not as observant of this code as they should be; but if, in the exercise of his profession, the private banker disregards this code which could never be expressed in legislation, but has a force far greater than any law, he will sacrifice his credit.

"This credit is his most valuable possession; it is the result of years of fair and honorable dealing and, while it may be quickly lost, once lost cannot be restored for a long time, if ever.

OBSERVED CODE

"If I may be permitted to speak of the firm, of which I have the honor to be the senior partner, I should state that at all times the idea of doing only first class business, and that in a first class way, has been before our minds. We have never been satisfied with simply keeping within the law, but have constantly sought so to act that we might fully observe the professional code, and so maintain the credit and reputation which has been handed down to use from our predecessors in the firm.

"Since we have no more power of knowing the future than any other men, we have made many mistakes (who has not during the past five years?), but our mistakes have been errors of judgment and not of principle."

"Another most important duty of the private banker is to take special care that his banking position in regard to his deposits is at all times sufficiently strong, knowing as he does that none of the aids provided by the government for incorporated banks, such as the Federal Reserve System or the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, are at his disposal.

RISK OWN MONEY

"So far as to the duties. I will now pass on to the uses of private bankers. These seem to me to be closely related to the fact that, as they are risking their own money and doing their own work, they may properly undertake certain responsibilities and businesses which the management of an incorporated bank might not be justified in dealing with.

"Subject to the paramount need of keeping their banking position toward their depositors sound and liquid, they can in a very prompt and effective way assist in the development of the industries and productions of this largely industrialized world.

"Since, as he has at stake not only his client's interests but his own reputation, he is likely to be especially careful. If he makes a public sale and puts his own name at the foot of the prospectus he has a continuing obligation of the strongest kind to see, so far as he can, that nothing is done which will interfere with the full carrying out by the obligor of the contract with the holder of the security.

"To accomplish this it is frequently desirable that the private banker should be a director of the company, the securities of which he has sold.

BANKING DIRECTORSHIPS

"In regard to the presence of private bankers on the boards of directors of other banking institutions, I believe it to be true that none of the directorships held by any private banker in other banking institutions is held at his request, but because of the strong desire of those in charge of the institution of which he becomes a director.

"This certainly is the case in our own firm and I believe in other cases, too, although, of course, I cannot speak for anybody but our own firm.

"Personally, I have always been averse to banking directorships for my partners, but I felt constrained reluctantly to consent, because of my belief that it is one of the duties of a private banker to be of use in the general affairs of the community, and that the only way people can be helped is in the way they wished to be helped.

"To sum up, I state without hesitation that I consider the private banker a national asset and not a national danger. As to the theory that he may become too powerful, it must be remembered that any power which he has comes, not from the possession of large means, but from the confidence of people in his character and credit, and that that power, having no force to back it, would disappear at once if people thought that the character had changed or the credit had diminished—not financial credit, but that which comes from the respect and esteem of the community."

Morgan Defense Shots

WASHINGTON, May 23.—(INS.)—Here are some of the highlights of J. P. Morgan's statement before the Senate Banking Committee today:

"I consider the private banker a national asset and not a national danger."

"The private banker has a code of professional ethics and customs, on the observance of which depend his reputation, his fortune, and his usefulness to the community in which he works . . . This code never could be expressed in legislation."

"We have made many mistakes (who has not during the last five years) but our mistakes have been errors of judgment and not of principle."

"The depression, for the first time as far as I know in the history of the world, is so widespread no country can lend money to any other."

"This condition will pass."

TRACE 'DEAL' BY MITCHELL

NEW YORK, May 23.—(AP.)—Testimony and evidence was introduced today to show that Mrs. Charles E. Mitchell could have made a profit of $823,500 on stock transferred to her by her husband, former chairman of the National City Bank, if she had sold at the proper time.

The government is attempting to show at Mitchell's trial for income tax evasion that the stock transfer was not an actual sale and was only entered into for the purpose of tax evasion.

It was shown that Mrs. Mitchell agreed to buy the stock at $212 a share, that it rose in value to $256 before declining to $43.50, at which point she sold it back to Mitchell at $212.

The prosecution alleges that the sale was not bona fide in that Mrs. Mitchell did not own enough money to pay for it and that she could not have sold it at the peak because it was held as collateral for a loan to her husband by J. P. Morgan & Co., which firm, previous testimony has shown, was not informed of the transfer to Mrs. Mitchell.

This morning's witnesses were a bank official, statisticians and an internal revenue agent.

OHIO TO FIGHT COAL RATES

COLUMBUS, O., May 23.—(INS.)—After attacking the Interstate Commerce Commission on 23 points for invalidating Ohio's reduced freight rates on coal, the State Utilities Commission and the Wheeling and Lake Erie Railroad today girded for a spectacular injunction suit which may hold the future of the Ohio coal industry.

Charging discrimination by the I. C. C. in favor of the coal of neighboring states, the two filed separate suits in United States District Court here yesterday, requesting that the higher rates fixed by the I. C. C. be set aside and that a temporary order be granted to delay their effectiveness on June 10.

MORGAN GOES TO INQUIRY UNDAUNTED

nating similarity about the Medici of Florence and the Morgans of Manhattan, and the J. P. Morgan who stepped into the sunlight of Washington this morning to face the Senate inquisitors was, allowing for a little difference in their tailors, Lorenzo to the life.

He appeared to have slept well, although it is known that he conferred late with Mr. Davis and assistant counsel; and his smile was easy and amiable. He walked with a spring in his step, with the spryness of a man in his fifties rather than in his later sixties.

Whatever the conclusions of the conference held in the hotel, there was nothing but confidence in the bearing and manner of the noted banker, whose sales of securities to the public in the last eight years amounted to slightly under $3,000,000,000.

DRAMA BEGINS

At all events, after the bell rang for action this morning in the committee room of the Senate Banking Committee in the Senate Office Building, real drama began, even for this center of drama, the nation's capital, which has had so much of the thrilling stuff in the past 11 weeks.

For the son of a Sicilian immigrant stood before the world's greatest banker—the man whose very name casts into the shade the great banking names of the past—the Rothschilds, the Belmonts and the Speyers—and demand an accounting.

Ferdinand Pecora, counsel for the Senate committee, began his battle to wrest from the head of the great house of Morgan the inner secrets of that hitherto aloof and closely guarded private banking house; a bank which until the last few months or so, was almost sacrosanct.

Only once before has the government of the United States had the temerity to summon a Morgan to the witness stand, and that was 20 years ago, under Woodrow Wilson, when J. Pierpont Morgan, Morgan the Magnificent, took the stand before the Pujo committee.

HIGH FINANCE

The committee room where the hearing is being held, a hearing which can scarcely fail to be sensational, which can scarcely fail to unearth extraordinary angles of high finance—and which, indeed, may prove the death knell of private banking in the United States—was crowded from wall to wall.

Newspaper correspondents were there, flashing to millions the latest bulletins of the give-and-take between Pecora and Morgan.

United States Senators and Representatives were there, some by virtue of their duties, others through sheer curiosity.

The lawyers for Big Business were there, with their majestic fronts and their polished language.

The telegraph wires will sizzle with the purport of Pecora's rapier-like thrusts and Morgan's studied replies.

These two men, so utterly different in origin, upbringing and point of view, are among the most interesting personalities in the public eye today. Pecora, witty and resourceful, was born in Sicily 51 years ago and came to this country as a boy of four. He by no means looks his 51 and would pass for an easy 42 or three, even though his once coal-black hair is graying.

PROUD OF AMERICANISM

Except for his olive skin and his flashing black eyes and his surname you would class him with any intelligent-looking, handsome American type—and that is what Ferdinand Pecora is proudest of—being a real American.

He made a fine reputation in the District Attorney's office in New York, but was passed over by Tammany when it came to nominating a successor for Jacob Banton, since Tammany looks coldly upon young men who exhibit too much force and independence.

And now the United States government, obviously bent on finding an answer to the old question, "Is there one law for the rich and another for the poor?" has called him into service to get at the innards of this whole banking abracadabra.

REED LAW FIRM EXPLAINS TAX CASE FEES

show that Reed profited through these cases, as a member of the firm handling them.

Immediate effect of the resolution was to bring from the Reed firm as explanation of its technical setup.

Smith, Shaw, McClay & Seifert is a law partnership operating in the offices of Reed, Smith, Shaw & McClay, but entirely distinct from the Reed partnership, according to John S. Frazer, of Reed, Smith, Shaw & McClay and president of the Allegheny County Bar Association.

The Reed firm pays all the office expenses of the smaller partnership, which was formed when Senator Reed went to the Senate and which since has handled all tax cases in the office, according to Frazer.

It was apparently the Smith, Shaw, McClay and Seifert firm to which McFadden referred when he spoke of "Smith Shaw and McClay."

Senator Reed, in Philadelphia, said he had no objection to publication of the list of clients of the firm. He added:

"It is a very respectable list. The last work I did for the Koppers Company was in 1920, two years before I entered the Senate. At that time I wrote a bond issue for them. I do not know whether other members of the firm have done any work since."

MELLONS UNDER FIRE

Meanwhile, Representative McFadden again attacked the Mellon interests with charges of tax evasion, according to an Associated Press report from Washington, D. C.

The charges were given to the House when McFadden read a letter he said he worte to Attorney General Cummings.

He charged that the Coalesced Company was formed so Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury and Ambassador to England, might pass his wealth to his children while he still lives, avoiding inheritance taxes. Mellon, McFadden charged, owns all the preferred stock of the company while his children, Paul Mellon and Mrs. David Bruce, own the common.

A similar company, he said, is the Priscar Company, owned entirely by R. B. Mellon. McFadden asked an investigation of both corporations.

A letter from a Pittsburgh coal operator, unnamed by McFadden, was quoted as saying the Koppers Company sells coal at excessive rates to Mellon-controlled utilities, while Mellon coal companies undersell competitors in the northern fields.

Russell, Olson Delay Filing New Mellon Suits

Advised by Pittsburgh attorneys this was not a propitious time for filing suits against officials of the Gulf Oil Corporation, Charles A. Russell and David A. Olson returned last night to Washington. Russell was attorney for Olson, who acted as a "citizen taxpayer" in a suit against Andrew W. Mellon to recover $220,000,000 taxes for the government.

Russell said last night he was ready for further action, and was merely investigating conditions here. He said he would return early in June.

PILOT WARNS AGAINST CONCEIT

Real Flying Hazards Are Described to Student

WIN YOUR WINGS
Installment No. 9.

On his way to the school hangar the following morning, Bill stopped at the Administration Building and there by chance met J. A. Townsend, the piloot who had befriended him on the first day.

"How are you coming?" Townsend queried.

"Fine," replied the boy. "I soloed yesterday. Flying is a cinch."

"Oh, yeah! Maybe it is easy to fly. Any dumbell can take a ship up and put it down, but that's not being a pilot. For instance, last night I was flying the mail on the Cleveland-Washington airway ——"

"You mean you were flying on the airline?"

"No, I mean the airway."

"What's that?"

"An airway is a route over which an airline flies. All air lines nowadays fly over what are known as improved airways. The Department of Commerce, helped in some cases by state governments and private companies, have in the last seven years built and are keeping up about 20,000 miles of airway, connecting almost every major city in the country.

"An airway is made up of approximately six different aids to navigation. First of all, there are beacon lights located every 10 miles or so to mark the way at night. Then, as frequently as may be necessary intermediate fields are built. They average in the neighborhood of 30 miles apart, depending upon the country. For instance, in some districts there is plenty of open country to come down in without emergency landing fields, so you don't need so many.

"The point is, that on an airway assuming a gliding angle of seven to one for an airplane there should be a sufficient number of intermediate fields or open country to make a landing at any time.

"The next feature is radio. Weather information and other messages are broadcast to the pilot at frequent intervals.

"What are known as radio range beacons are also installed. These send out a beam for the pilot to follow, and so keep him on his course, even though he can't see the ground. In addition each intermediate field is equipped with a marker beacon to indicate its position to a pilot flying over the top of it at times when he can't see due to fog or other weather conditions.

"Lastly, a teletype system connects each intermediate field with all the others so that they can intercommunicate continually."

Bill looked his surprise:

"You mean that when you are flying you can follow a series of lights in good weather, or a radio beam in bad weather. That intermediate fields have sort of radio sign posts on them, and communicate with each other, and that the weather dope is broadcast to the planes?"

"Yes, that's it exactly, but—as I was saying—last night I brought a trimotor into Washington on trip 4, and by the time I was due to go out on trip 7 the weather had become so bad that I had to take out a mail plane.

"In the way back the clouds had closed in right down to the ground, and I had to fly through them by instruments to get on top. Once on top it was a question of following the beam until I got past Ligonier.

"At that point I ran into another bank of clouds, this time so high that I couldn't get over the top.

"I had to radio Pittsburgh to find out if it was okay to come down through or if the clouds were still right down on the ground. They told me it was okay to come down, and I got into Pittsburgh all right. But that's an entirely different story from flying around an airport in fine weather."

"I'll say it is," exclaimed Bill. "I guess there is more to flying than I thought."

"You bet. You have a long way to go yet—and don't forget—aviation has no use for 'smart aleck' fliers."

Social Relations Meeting Postponed

Unable to complete their program for a three-day social relations conference, the Methodist Episcopal Church committee today had postponed indefinitely the program scheduled to open at the Downtown Y. M. C. A.

Inability to have Bishop Francis J. McConnell, formerly of Pittsburgh, and other prominent speakers attend at this time was given as the reason for the postponement. Delegates from 12 states were to have attended.

STEEL OUTPUT HIGHEST HERE IN YEAR

Pittsburgh's steel production jumped to 26 per cent of capacity today, the highest point in a year, as the Carnegie Steel Company announced a 12,460-ton steel rail order for the Pennsylvania Railroad Company.

Work of turning out the order will start Friday at the Edgar Thomson works, giving men in the mill full time work for several days, it was reported at the general offices of the company.

23,500 TONS ORDERED

Orders for the rolling of a total of 23,500 tons of rails have been let by the Pennsylvania to three companies: Bethlehem, 9,790 tons; Inland Steel, 1,250 and the Carnegie allotment.

Four additional fundamental factors in the industrial life of the Pittsburgh district were alluded to as reliable indexes of a return to normalcy today by experts.

They are increased carloadsings for iron ore, coal and coke and a 10-cent rise in the price of Pennsylvania crude oil.

Ore loadings for the week ending May 13, according to the Allegheny Regional Advisory Board here, amounted to 6,724, representing an increase of 958 over the preceding week and 4,131 above the corresponding week last year.

COAL LOADINGS UP

Coal loadings for the same week were 81,046, or 4,381 ahead of the previous week and 7,518 more than in the same period in 1932.

With 3,728 ars of coke loaded within the week, that figure was 247 higher than the preceding week and 712 above the same week a year ago.

Total freight loadings for the week were 531,095 cars, according to the American Railway Association, an increase of 7,276 compared with the week ending May 6. This also was 13,835 ahead of the same week in 1932.

The advance in Pennsylvania grade crude oil was announced by the South Penn Oil Company. The new price is: Southwest Penn Pipe Line, $1.07; Eureka, $1.02, and Buckeye, 90 cents.

Exceeding expectations of steel men, production in the Youngstown district today was 1 per cent higher than had been anticipated, operating at 43 per cent.

Movies, Dances Amuse 'Troops' In Forest Army

Men working in the forest army camps are beginning to enjoy entertainment similar to the best the big city has to offer, according to word received today by the army amateur radio station in the Loman Armory.

Movie houses in the vicinity of the camps, according to the report, have all cut their prices in half for any man in the uniform of the Civilian Conservation Corps.

People in the vicinity of the camps invite the men to attend square dances free, and the men are taken to the dances in trucks.

Chartiers Names Highway Delegate

J. C. McCartney, a member of the Chartiers Board of Trade, has been appointed to represent that organization on the committee of civic leaders studying a more direct route for the Lincoln and William Penn highways from the West End to Thornburg. McCartney was named at the board's meeting last night.

Contest Rules

The rules of the "Win Your Wings" contest follow:

The Sun-Telegraph will publish in 12 installments the serial "Win Your Wings," the experiences of a student pilot. Three questions relative to aviation subjects will be printed each day, the answers to each being contained in some previous installment.

Read each day's installment and answer the questions. Thirty-six questions must be answered. When your list of questions and answers is complete, send them to the "Win Your Wings" Contest Editor, Sun-Telegraph, Telegraph Square, Pittsburgh, together with an essay of not more than 250 words on "Why I Want to Fly."

Questions and answers must be accompanied by essay.

TEN PRIZES

Winners will be selected as to largest number of correct answers and merit of essay. In case of ties duplicate awards will be given.

First prize—Choice of a pilot's course at the Penn School or a round trip to Chicago, good for 60 days.

Second—Choice of a mechanic's course and full apprenticeship or two round trip flights to Washington, D. C., good for 60 days.

Third—Pilot's ground course or one round trip flight to Washington.

Fifth—Round trip to Cleveland.

Sixth to tenth prizes, inclusive—Round trip flights to Akron.

Winners of first, second, third and fourth prizes will be subject to United States Department of Commerce regulations governing aviation students. To be eligible for a pilot's course, student must be 16 years of age or over, and, if a minor, must have parents' written consent to fly. Passenger flights to various cities as designated are optional.

Beauty Contest—

What accounts for the clear, fresh skins so many girls possess?

Why, there's a soap called Camay that is going like wildfire because it improves the skin of every girl smart enough to use it!

Camay, the Soap of Beautiful Women, is made expressly for the delicate feminine skin. It yields billows of rich, creamy lather. Use it—and this is how you'll gain! The first cake you use will make your skin feel as soft and silky as a kitten's ear. And then will come the proud lift of your chin. For you'll sense that admiring eyes are following you, and flattering things are being said about you!

Hold that admiration—keep it coming with Camay. For life is a long Beauty Contest and you are competing with many good-looking girls for the love and admiration you desire. Let Camay help!

THE "GOOD TASTE TREND" IS ALL TO CAMAY

During the six months past—thousands and thousands of smart girls have changed their old soap habits. They've gone modern—they've taken up Camay.

Camay ought to be higher priced than the soap you now are using. It isn't—it's lower! Camay sells at a low 1933 price. Check that up and see what a surprise is in store for you!

WOMAN, 5 MEN FACE COURT IN BOMBING

Five men and one woman, accused in connection with the bombing of the home of Charles Martin, Republican chairman of the Tenth Ward and assistant city assessor, were held for court without bail today in Central Police Court.

Martin, whose home was badly damaged by the explosion early on the morning of May 10, appeared in court to tell how he was approached several days previous to the explosion by two of the men who he declared asked him to intercede with police to allow them to sell liquor.

Those held, charged with malicious destruction of property by explosives, are Frank Chrurazzi, 31, of 228 Gross street; Nick Gurgolo, 18, 4823 Penn avenue; John Caldone, 21, 6923 Greenwood street; David Gaeto, 35, of 4823 Penn avenue; Joseph Bondi, 32, of 4823 Penn avenue, and Mrs. Katheryn Cherry, 32, of 309 Fifty-sixth street.

HUSBAND MISSING

The woman was arrested in a downtown hotel with Chrurazzi, according to city detectives.

The woman's husband, Frank Cherry, wanted in connection with the bombing, has fled town, Inspector of Detectives Frank R. Boyd said.

Martin told Magistrate Leo Rothenberg he did not know who bombed his home at 115 North Aiken avenue. He said:

"A man who introduced himself as Bondi, told me that Police Inspector Charles Cahill had knocked him off that day and asked if I would go to Cahill and intercede. I told Bondi I would take no part in rackets."

VISITED AGAIN

The next day Bondi and Gaeto both visited him at his home, Martin said, and again asked him to get Cahill to let them alone.

He said:

"I asked Bondi who he was buying his whisky from and he replied Chrurazzi."

Joseph Gurgole, of 5164 Butler street, arrested in connection with the bombing, was discharged for lack of evidence.

What Are You Going to Do About It?

Can any citizen have read recent crime statistics and not have been shocked inordinately by the shameful story those figures told?

Using Chicago as an example—because Chicago, among cities, has had the courage to hold up the ugly facts and examine them—statistics show:

Never since 1921, fewer than 55 bombings in a full year, with the peak at 118 in 1928. Property damage—$141,560 in 1928, but up to $197,109 in 1929, with bombing cases three fewer in number.

Other cities are JUST AS BAD.

Total bombings and gang murders for this entire country during the same years would not even resemble the ordinary "crime report." They would look like casualty lists in the World War.

This appalling destruction of property, this hideous business of gang murder, going on for years and years, is something to make all America blush.

Every city has got to be aroused to the enormity of the conditions, and has got to do its share in stopping these horrors.

And that means—the CITIZENS THEMSELVES have got to do something.

What are you going to do about it?

PLANS CHANGES AT COXTOWN

Father Cox has not announced his complete plans, but he has in mind the reorganization of "Coxtown," his farming community on Kittanning pike, with the idea of putting the place on an absolutely self-supporting basis. He has had this matter in mind for several weeks, has had the benefit of counsel from experts in developments of this character and has mapped out a plan that he thinks will work wonders at this unique settlement for the unemployed. These plans will not be disclosed for another week.

Through the donations of food made at the Triangle Theater Sunday, Father Cox is in a position to take care of several hundred of his needy families for a week at least. This benefit was arranged for and promoted by the Sun-Telegraph.

ELTON FAVORS TRADE REFORM

Reuel W. Elton, manager of the Better Business Bureau of Pittsburgh, denounced "cut-throat" competition in modern business in an address before the Dormont Rotary Club in the Dormont Methodist Episcopal Church yesterday. He said:

"Business must be raised to a higher plane than it has been in the last two years if it is not to perish."

He declared the Better Business Bureau intends to organize all small merchants of Allegheny County into a council within the bureau as an adjunct to its fight against fraud.

DEBATE FATE OF BANK HERE

A series of conferences is scheduled this week at which directors and officers of the Pennsylvania Trust Company, meeting with the State Banking Department, will attempt to devise a plan for liquidation or continued operation.

The trust company has been closed with deposits made before March 1 totally restricted since the bank holiday.

A meeting of the stockholders, held yesterday, left arrangements to the discretion of the board of directors. Final action is expected within two weeks.

A proposition for a downtown trust company to take over the trust department of the institution is being considered, it was learned.

Several other tentative plans are said to be under consideration.

KRAZY KAT

PATTERN NO. 444

Krazy Kat and his friend Ignatz, the mouse, are with us in this pattern. Their astonished and bewildered expressions have been caught in these simple embroidery designs that will make an attractive pillow, crib cover motif, motifs for children's clothes, or a decoration on accessories for the nursery. These droll figures have long been beloved by children and grown-ups everywhere, and this occasion to embroider them yourself is the first such opportunity given the needlewoman. The figures are worked out in the simplest of stitches, outline and one-stitch being the only ones employed. The pattern contains one large motif, 10x17 inches; one Krazy Kat, 5x7 inches, and one reverse; one Krazy Kat, 3x4 inches, and a reverse; one Ignatz, 3x5 inches, and a reverse, and two Ignatz, 1½x2¼ inches, and two reverses.

Send 10c for this pattern to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

CHILD'S TARIFF VIEWS O. K.'D

PHILADELPHIA, May 23.—(AP.)—What 10-year-old Anne Caner thinks this country needs is "medium sort of in-between tariffs," and today she's the proud possessor of documentary evidence that the Roosevelt administration agrees with her.

Tariffs, which she had been reading about in school, kept Anne awake nights so she wrote to President Roosevelt about them. Yesterday she received a reply from Sidney Morgan, secretary of the Tariff Commission, calling her a good citizen and telling her lots about the vexing problem.

The letter was accompanied by a stack of books and pamphlets which Anne intends to read "as soon as I get a dictionary."

Telling Anne that her "medium-sort-of-in-between" tariffs are "just what we are all looking for," Secretary Morgan said losing sleep over the subject is "nothing to be alarmed about."

Pension Bill Action Urged by Machinists

District Council No. 6, International Association of Machinists, comprising Allegheny County, has written Gov. Gifford Pinchot urging a special session of the Legislature to pass the old age pension bill, the minimum wage bill and to forbid child labor and sweatshops, according to the announcement.

The council pledges itself to work and vote against any Legislator or Senator who opposes these measures.

QUEEN'S MIRTH STOPS SHOW

LONDON, May 23.—(INS.)—London smiled at King George's expense today after the King making his first public appearance in two weeks, attended last night's command variety performance at the Palladium.

According to those who sat near the royal box, some of the wisecracks of the performers "went over the King's head."

The King attended with Queen Mary and the Duke and Duchess of York, and the latter was kept busy explaining the jokes to the King when he failed to "get them."

One of the skits which didn't quite click with His Majesty was described as follows:

A man was shown lying in bed in a hospital and a baby was placed beside him. He protested against this, saying:

Suit Charges Lamp Patent Violation

The General Electric Company, Schenectady, N. Y., filed an equity suit yesterday in Federal Court charging the General Vacuum Products Corporation and the Warren Lamp Company, both of Warren, Pa., and four individuals, with infringement of a patent on an improvement in tipless incandescent lamps.

An injunction is sought by the plaintiff.

RAID ON CUBAN TOWN SEEN

HAVANA, May 23.—(INS.)—A rebel raid on Santa Cruz del Sur was believed in progress today after telephone and telegraph communications between Santa Clara and Santa Cruz were disrupted.

The coastal town is 12 miles from a sugar mill owned by Gen. Marion Menocal, former president of Cuba, who is mentioned as a possible leader in the current uprisings.

Federal forces encountered 15 insurgents at Najasa, killing one and forcing the others to flee.

The Federal forces in Central and Eastern Cuba are said to be facing increasing peril as insurrectionists in the hills are reported gaining numbers rapidly.

The climax in the political situation is expected to come this week.

Bank Bandits Get $5,000 in Indiana

LOWELL, Ind., May 23.—(INS.)—Four unmasked bandits entered the Lowell National Bank, fired at three persons, none of whom were wounded, and escaped with approximately $5,000 today.

Ted Husing Describes Boat Race For Half-Hour—to Himself

By AIRCASTER

The news of the day:

NEW YORK—Tony Wons' experiences inflation of fan mail following publication of story that he is through for all time with radio, and plotted a volume to "expose" radio. Facts are: Wons' contract is up Saturday, he takes a Wisconsin vacation, will write a book on "My Radio Experiences" and will return to air in October.

PHILADELPHIA—Announcer's pride shattered by nature. Ted Husing describes in hottest terms a Schuylkill River boat race for half an hour and then discovers he wasn't on the air because wind blew down an antenna. Husing will be released from his straight-jacket today.

DUBLIN, IRELAND—Native reception planned here for Morton Downey who sails from the U. S. May 30. After kissing the blarney stone, Downey will leave for an engagement at Paris' Cafe De La Paix, whose management believes Downey has got what it taix.

WASHINGTON—Army band will show itself to a nation-wide hookup beginning a full hour weekly schedule over WJZ Thursday night.

HOLLYWOOD—Stooges' Association here filing applicatoins of candidates for stooging Ed Wynn, who will lose Graham McNamee when he comes here July 5 to begin a film.

NEW YORK—Ben Alley and Paul Sabin sign for a twice-a-week show at WEAF at 7:30 in the evening.

NEW YORK—Thirty radio artists on one program is the line-up planned for WJAS's anniversary broadcast on May 31, of Bob Taplinger's series, "Meet the Artist."

Globe-Trotting

By LOUIS L. KAUFMAN

Hello, ladies and gentlemen:

Whoever he or she may be, the kind person who donated the artificial limb to William Dolan deserves to know something of the happiness created by the gift, Mr. Dolan gratefully writes:

"It has made me take a different slant on life. I felt pretty discouraged after I lost my leg and knew how difficult it would be to get a job if I walked on a crutch. Now I know people are willing to help if they can."

I wish I could answer definitely all the questions you have sent me asking how the beer licensing law applies to your particular establishment. Those questions can't be so answered.

It is a new law and many of the vague points have not been cleared up and can't be until a court passes on them. Many authorities have offered rulings on several controversial phases but even these rulings are opinions of those who are trying their best to interpret the law as the court might.

I may be going a bit far, but after talking with county officials and studying the law and the application permits I feel that if you are honest in your purpose, have no intent to operate any place of business that violates what you think is the letter and spirit of the law, and fill out that application to the best of your ability, you will not have to feel panicky about obtaining a license.

Wives Termed as Slackers And Slaves by Readers

Is it up to a wife to get her husband's breakfast?

Queer question—but it's raising Cain in many a home. So much Cain that one indignant lady dragged it into this department.

Why should she have to leave her comfortable bed to connect a percolator and pour a bowl of breakfast food, all of which her husband could do perfectly well for himself—and then face dreary hours with "nothing on earth to do?"

She expected sympathy—but didn't get it. For, being a Working Lady ourself, we didn't see why another female shouldn't get on her job; and, in case she wouldn't accept our vote, we asked the readers to give their view.

So now comes Freda F., and here's her say-so:

"Get his breakfast? She certainly should!

"It seems to me little enough to do—for a man who gets up in the early hours of the morning to hustle out to work to keep a roof over a woman's head—to get up and see that he has a hot cup of coffee, a bowl of mush or some eggs, and a little interest and cheer, to send him out feeling that he is something besides just a pack animal for the family!

"Women nowadays are getting too soft to live. They think they should have all the privileges and be carried around on a pink satin pillow.

"Plenty of our mothers and grandmothers got up at daylight or earlier—and never dreamed of feeling abused—to cook breakfasts for their men who had to toil in the fields, or make long hauls to market. Now, lighting a gas jet seems to be too much for some of our lolling ladies."

DAUGHTER DISPLEASED

All of which is true. But, according to "Devoted Daughter," there are cases and cases—and circumstances sometimes alter 'em. So her mamma getting breakfast made her go on the warpath. Listen!

"For 15 years my mother got up mornings, started the fire, heated the coffee, cooked the eggs and toasted the bread for her 'friend husband.' But when I got old enough to realize things I decided there was going to be a change.

"Honestly, it is pitiful to hear her pleading with my father to get up, and it was maddening to hear him just grumble a reply. Then when he decided to amble down at 6:30 (he should have been leaving by that time) did he give her even a smile, or a pleasant word that might have rewarded her for working, waiting and worrying about his being too late to have a bite of breakfast?

"He did not! He came, snapping and growling, just like a wild animal loosed from its cage. That was one of the cases where a wife getting breakfast didn't go down—with me, at least.

"I was about 15 at the time. I knew Mamma had to be at work herself at 10 in the morning, fresh and ready for a long day, so I decided there was going to be a little re-arranging.

COOKS OWN BREAKFAST

"That was five or six years ago. The Big Boss gets up at 6 o'clock these mornings—to the tune of an alarm clock. And he cooks his own breakfast. It has become a habit, and a good habit at that; for now when Mamma does get us to cook it for him, he appreciates it.

"It is my honest opinion that any wife is a fool to get up in the mornings early when her every effort to help and please is grumped and scowled at.

"Besides, I think it would be a good thing for a good many wives and mothers to learn to be a little selfish now and then. No man is worth worrying about to the extent of endangering your health and getting to look all dragged out. A lot of wives need to demand more for themselves, and be a little less of the slave to their husbands and children, and a little more of themselves. They'd be happier.

"Dad still gets his breakfasts, and Mamma still sleeps her extra hour, and no one complains. Doubtless he'd be the same old selfish grouch, if someone hadn't told him a few things!"

Freda F. says that modern wives are slackers.

"Devoted Daughter," says they're slaves.

Which, if either, is right?

"Diamond in the Rough" Has No Sparkle or Fire, Fay King Warns

By FAY KING

A diamond "in the rough" has no fire or sparkle.

It comes from the diamond mine in a load of "blue ground" which is volcanic mud that ages ago was forced into oval pipe-like escapes leading upward from the depths of the earth.

In enough "blue ground" to fill an excavation for a large building, only a good-sized packing-case full of diamonds are found.

This diamondiferous earth is sifted from puddling cylinders to shaking tables.

After countless separators had been unsuccessfully tried it was discovered that so simple a thing as lard would hold the precious stones only, all else dropping.

-:- How to Keep Well -:-

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

Adjust Body to More Active Summer Days

Warm summer days encourage hundreds of hibernating city dwellers to start on trips to the shore and country. The longing for the great open spaces is excellent, but indulgence in unusual exercise may have undesirable results.

Dr. Copeland

From the practically negligible physical exertion of cold weather to the more active summer sports demands adjustment. In the winter most city dwellers consider a walk to the nearest street car, or a short stroll of some sort, to be the limit of their exercise. Then with the coming of summer, active participation in such sports as tennis, swimming, golf or long hikes, is really far too strenuous. Indulgence in these sports should be gradual. Otherwise, after a week-end in the country, stiffened muscles and an exhausted, tired feeling make the week's work laborious and difficult.

The health of the body and its ability to protect itself against infection, depend upon the nourishment of the body cells. The laws of good health require proper food, water and oxygen. Exercise makes the heart beat rapidly and the lungs breathe deeply. In consequence the required amount of oxygen is obtained. Without sufficient exercise one cannot expect to have good health.

Men under 20 or over 40 should not attempt to enter a Marathon race. Dangerous consequences usually follow overexertion. Long hikes, especially over rough country, or mountain climbing, should not be attempted by those whose muscles have not been put in good condition by previous training.

Long distance swimming requires endurance and brings into use many of the muscles not otherwise used. The effect of swimming, however, is much less trying on the nerves than running. It is one of the most healthful of outdoor sports.

The temperature of the water is very important. The action of too cold water is depressing and it is harmful to spend long hours in the water at one time. Exhaustion, chills, ear troubles, are some of the discomforts apt to result from over-indulgence in swimming.

Tennis is an exercise that requires both nerve and muscular control. Preparatory training is requisite if one is to acquire skill in this game and to avoid nervous and physical strain.

No single exercise should be practiced to the point of fatigue. A certain amount of muscular work is excellent, but an excess forms what we know as "fatigue products" in the muscles. If the first symptoms of weariness following exercise are disregarded a condition known on the athletic field as "staleness" develops.

By this is meant that the patient lacks energy and ambition, he is weary even after eight or nine hours of sleep, and frequently is drowsy during the day. Even the slightest effort seems a burden and mental dullness results. In severe cases the appearance shows a lack of physical health, the muscles are lax, the eyes sunken and the face pinched. Prolonged rest is required to bring the nervous and muscular system back to normal.

These are a few reasons why great care must be used in exercising. This, too, is why schools place such emphasis on the need of careful direction by the athletic instructors.

Hints for the Household

Dishtowels should be washed at least once a day.

Bran water used as a shampoo will give a natural gloss to the deadened hair.

If you have gotten the oven too hot for the food you wish to put into it, place a small pan of cold water in the bottom of the oven. It will cause the temperature to drop immediately.

Patent leather shoes and handbags will respond beautifully to a milk bath and it is very good for the leather. Dampen a cloth with milk and rub over the bag.

Heart of a Wife -:- Continuation of Love's Reawakening

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Is Fearful for Herself and Ronald

There was something in the way that Nick, the gangster, uttered the words "Husband! Baby's husband! Now, ain't that just too bad!" that made me feel as if some surgeon with a hypodermic syringe had just injected ice water into my veins.

"What's it to us if she has a dozen husbands?" Tony snarled.

"Nothing at all to you, sweetheart," Nick retorted. "For that matter," he went on, significantly, "I don't have to let it be anything to me, either. Hubby's the lad to worry, not me."

He was silent for perhaps half a minute while I sat silent in an anguished tenseness that I knew Ronald shared. Then he turned abruptly to the boy.

"You were telling us things, Kid, when Tony got his brain storm," he said encouragingly. "Go on from where you left off. You beat it away from the car when it stopped, and you saw a queer blue light behind a hedge. What did you do then, or, more important, what did the car do?"

"The car turned into a gate set in the hedge," Ronald said. "It was a gate so cleverly concealed that you couldn't see it was there until the gate swung open. And it closed immediately afterward. I suppose my imagination was working overtime, but I had a sense as of armed guards behind that gate."

"You weren't making any mistake on that score, Kid."

REMEMBERED WARNING

There was that in his voice that spelled a distinctly sinister menace to Jerry if Nick and Tony should ever catch him unprotected by his body guard.

"And what did you do, Kid, when the gate closed?" he asked.

"What could I do?" Ronald countered, his voice boyishly defensive. "I knew if I tried to get in that beast would get onto the fact that someone knew where he was taking her, and that I would spoil not only my chance of helping her, but your plans also. I think I'd have made a stab at it anyway, only I remembered what you said, Aunt Madge, that her very life might depend upon my not rushing in where I couldn't do anything."

"You did exactly the right thing, Ronald," I said encouragingly, and then I turned impetuously to Nick.

"Oh! must we wait here?" I begged. "I'm so afraid he'll get her away and we'll lose track of her."

"Take it easy, Babe," Nick adjured. "We'll start right away. Turn on the juice, and send her along down the road. I'll bunk back in here with Tony until we come to the place where I'll do better on the running board."

FOLLOWS DIRECTIONS

He climbed into the back seat with Tony, and I obeyed his admonition to send the car along. But we had gone less than a mile when he adjured me to "slow the boat down to a crawl."

"Turn the next on your left, Babe! Don't miss it. You'll hardly think it's a road if you don't keep your eyes open."

He was fully justified in his comment. If he had not warned me, I should have driven past the narrow roadway, so girt with unpruned bushes and tangled vines as to be almost hidden. But Nick did not trust my eyes or my judgment. Even as the powerful headlights picked out the opening, he said sharply.

"Here it is, Baby!" but I already was swerving the car toward the opening, and when I was through, with a narrow, rutted road opening before me, he laughed indulgently.

"Good work, Babe! You're not so slow, are you?"

"Thank you," I murmured, non-committally, but to myself I said fiercely that if I had to hear myself addressed in this man's voice as "Babe" or "Baby" many times more, I could not be responsible for my own reactions to the hateful sound.

But when he next called me "Baby," I had no reaction save tense, thrilled excitement. For we had proceeded only a scant half mile when he said abruptly:

"Draw the car as close as you can to the bushes, Babe, and turn the engine off. There's a car coming out that back way of Jerry's."

—With—

Patricia Pitt

Today I want to tell you some more about that event that everyone will want to attend—the second Hart's Run Hunt Junior Horse Show Saturday June 3, in the show ring at Hartwood, the John W. Lawrences' Glenshaw home.

The affair is sponsored by the Fox Chapel Hunt, which is aiding the Junior Hunt in arranging the show. And as I mentioned before it's to be for the benefit of the Allegheny County Emergency Fund.

And the show this year is going to be a bigger affair than ever, to run from 11 o'clock in the morning to 5:30 in the afternoon. Luncheon will be served on the grounds.

For your reservations—there'll be reserved parking spaces—call young Mary Louise Flinn, the A. Rex Flinns' daughter.

Classes For Show

The classes sound most attractive, and like those for grown ups' shows. There's even a class for hunt teams.

Riders will be divided into two classes—boys and girls between 12 and 16 years old, and children under 12.

The grown ups form two committees, the ring and catalog committees. John W. Lawrence is chairman of the ring, aided by Raymond Hilliard, Mrs. Simon T. Patterson, T. J. Hilliard, Dr. Edward McCague, Bliss Flaccus and A. Rex Flinn. And Mrs. John W. Lawrence, with Mrs. J. T. Hilliard and Mrs. A. Rex Flinn is in charge of the catalog.

Group Heads

Harry Hilliard of stabling, aided by Raymond Hilliard and George Davison; Mary Hilliard of entries, aided by Peggy Bakewell and Sherwood Martin.

On the trophy committee are Jane Flaccus, chairman; Betty Laughlin and Ann Teal; on parking space, Mary Louise Flinn, chairman; Tommy Hilliard and Virginia Witherow. And Alfred Hunt is chairman of the advertisement committee.

The judges are Dr. Ralph Lynch, Torrance Miller, George R. McNary and George Cherrington.

Entertain For Bride

Eleanor Evans, niece of Mrs. Hugh Rodman, of Oakmont, will marry John Cecil Norman, of Louisville, Ky., at the Rodman home Thursday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock.

Eliza Boyd will give a tea in her home, Squirrel Hill avenue, tomorrow afternoon. And on Thursday before the wedding, Kathleen Hays Guthrie will give a luncheon for the bridal party.

For you who are fascinated by old silver and antique furniture, the Woman's Exchange will have a special attraction today. The exhibit opened today and will continue the remainder of the week.

Antique Exhibit

There's to be something new at the University Club this summer—monthly series of supper dances. The first one will be held Saturday, May 27, and will be repeated each month during the summer.

The Pleasant Hill Farm Association will meet at the farm today—the farm is near Glenwillard—to prepare the place for the vacation seasons of many young girls. Mrs. Lewis A. Park is president; Mrs. David M. Gilmore, secretary, and Mrs. William S. McKinney, treasurer.

Among those playing a role in the gay social life at White Sulphur Springs are the junior Samuel Pryors, of Greenwich, Conn. They gave a dinner Saturday in the Terrace dining room of the Greenbrier.

Entertain At Resort

Mrs. Pryor is the former Mary Taylor Allderdice, daughter of the Taylor Allderdices and a sister of Mrs. Willis McCook Reed and Mrs. Leonard S. Mudge.

Alexander Storey, of Wilkinsburg, will sail June 15 on the Aquitania to visit relatives in London and Manchester and Joseph Bell, of Belfast, Ireland, formerly of Wilkinsburg. Before returning to the States late in September, Mr. Storey will visit France and Belgium and perhaps Germany.

* * *

The event of events for the younger school set here in town in early June will be the Delphi Club's annual spring dance at the Hotel Schenley June 2.

Spring Dance

Members of the club are students at Shady Side Academy and Arnold schools or Taylor Allderdice or Peabody High Schools.

George Y. Miller is chairman of the dance committee. And the aides are from Winchester and Ellis Schools and Peabody High School.

Entertainments for June brides-to-be are beginning already, for after all, June isn't far away. And those who wish to entertain for brides of early June will have to hurry.

Entertain Brides

Today Mrs. J. B. Marshall is giving a bridge-luncheon in her home for Dorothy C. Miller, daughter of the J. William Millers, of Woodmont street, who will marry Harold Smith Haller, son of the Oliver J. Hallers, of Woodmont street, June 1.

One of the June brides-to-be is still a school girl, and will be until early next month. She's Betty Marshall, daughter of the Elder W. Marshalls, who'll marry Gardner Mundy, son of the Harry G. Mundys, of Ronoake, Va., June 20.

McHugh-Fierst Wedding Set For June 6

Mr. and Mrs. Martin J. McHugh, of Washington, have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Anne Loretta McHugh to Charles E. Fierst, sone of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fierst, of Pittsburgh. The ceremony will take place June 6 in the Shrine of the Sacred Heart, in Washington, with the Rev. Mons. P. C. Gavin, officiating. The reception and wedding dinner will be held in the Hotel Mayflower.

Miss McHugh has named her attendants. Her sister, Mrs. Joseph Droney, of Pittsburgh, will be matron of honor, and Miss Monica Josephine McHugh will be maid of honor. The bridesmaids will be Miss Margaret Frances Brown, Miss Frances Ursula McHugh, Miss Oswaldo DeLa Rosa and Miss Evelyn Virginia Fierst, sister of the bridegroom-elect.

Dierdre Maureen Droney, small niece of the bride-elect, will be the flower girl. Frederick Donnelly will be ringbearer, and Jacqueline Joy Droney will be train bearer.

Martin McHugh will be the best man, and ushers will include Frank Coleman, Phillip Leinweber, Clemens Degnan, Oswaldo DeLa Rosa and Joseph M. Droney, of Pittsburgh.

Miss McHugh is a graduate of the Holy Cross Academy and of the Immaculata Junior College, Washington. At present she is studying at George Washington University. Her fiance, a graduate of the University of Pittsburgh, 1930, is completing his medical course at Georgetown University, School of Medicine. He is a member of Phi Chi, Phi Kappa and Chi Rho Mu.

Elizabeth Beck Honor Guest At Tea

A tea was given Sunday by Miss Ann Bloomgren, and Mrs. Louis Buehl, II, in Mrs. Buehl's home in the Coronada Apartments, honoring Miss Elizabeth E. Beck, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. Porter Beck, of Eastwood road, whose marriage to the Rev. James Allie Davidson, of Boston and Texas will take place in the garden of the Beck home on June 9.

There were 25 guests at the tea, which was given from 3 until 5 o'clock.

Year Books of Homewood Women's Club Presented At Annual Luncheon

By MRS. CHARLES M. BREGG

The new year books of the Homewood Women's Club made their appearance at the annual luncheon yesterday in the College Club. It's a busy year that Mrs. Harry Doverspike, the new president, will oversee, beginning with president's day on October 2. Federation Day comes later that month, and there's also a visit to the international art exhibit scheduled for October.

A talk on "Flanders Field," by W. L. Christon, and a Thanksgiving program by the members constitute November's events. December will bring a Christmas tea for members and the customary holiday party for the children of the community.

Election of the nominating committee is down for the first thing in the new year, this to come at the meeting which the Rev. Orva Lee Ice will address. James H. Dale is speaker for a Lincoln's Birthday program.

Another afternoon by "home talent," a meeting at Westinghouse High School with an educational program, an evening meeting featured by a fashion show and quilt exhibit, a lecture by Dr. O. E. Jennings, curator of botany at Carnegie Museum; a civic and legislative afternoon, "A Visit to Petra," with the Rev. Dr. James A. Kelso speaking; the annual meeting and the annual luncheon will fill the remainder of the season.

Covers were laid for 100 at yesterday's luncheon, which was one of the most delightful this organization has ever had. The program was especially enjoyable and welcomed back to the club two artists who have previously pleased with their work—Mrs. J. Charles Wilson and Mrs. C. E. Foster's slim young daughter, Betty, looking like a bit of spring in her flesh-colored seersucker organdy frock with its many little white ruffles.

Mrs. Wilson chose a compilation of readings appropriate for June "gypsying," gleaning her selections from Grace Noll Crowell, Barbara Young, Edna St. Vincent Millay and other sources. With Virginia Brown Wilharm at the piano, Miss Foster sang Deems Taylor's "May Day Carol" and Terry's "The Answer."

Souvenir Programs Given At Music Club Biennial

Attendants at the National Federation of Music Clubs' eighteenth biennial in Minneapolis this week are receiving souvenir programs, handsomely bound in silver and containing photographs of many of the organizations and individual artists on the programs.

B. P. W. Invites 'First Lady' to Convention

The name of Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, first active member of the Federation to become "First Lady of the Land," heads the invitation list to the biennial convention of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs which is to be held July 9 to 15 in Chicago. Mrs. Herbert Hoover and Mrs. Calvin Coolidge were honorary members of the federation.

Other distinguished women invited are Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, Mrs. Nellie Tayloe Ross, former Governor of Wyoming and first woman director of the mint; Mrs. Hattie Caraway, first woman elected to the United States Senate; Miss Jeannette Rankin, first Congresswoman; Mrs. Bertha K. Landes, of Seattle, first woman Mayor of a large American city; Miss Mary Anderson, senior among women now heading government bureaus, and Miss Annabel Matthews, first woman member of the United States Board of Tax Appeals.

Also included are Judge Genevieve Cline, first woman appointed to the United States Customs Court; Mrs. Anna C. M. Tillinghast, of Boston, only woman commissioner of immigration in the world; Mrs. Jean Wittich, of Minnesota, first woman to become a state budget commissioner, and Mrs. Mabel G. Reinecke, first woman collector of Internal Revenue.

Mrs. Rea to Entertain For Mining Auxiliary

Members of the Woman's Auxiliary to the American Institute of Mining and Metallurgical Engineers are motoring to Rector today to be the guests of Mrs. James C. Rea at her home there. Luncheon is being served at 12:30 o'clock. Mrs. Ralph E. Davis, president of the auxiliary, has made transportation arrangements for the meeting, which closes the season.

Gossipy Chat

By NANCY JANE

The goat that Ghandi was parading around with this past week to advertise the Ad Club's display belongs to Mrs. M. W. St. John, of Fox Chapel.

Besides composing music and being an active member in the Tuesday Musical and College clubs, Mrs. St. John raises goats. Hospitals use the milk.

Saw Mrs. T. M. Jones III, society's most recent career-woman, lunching the other day. She's with one of the large department stores.

And she looked as fresh as though she had slept half the morning instead of working. She wore a smart black crepe dress having epaulettes of white fringe, giving her a most intriguing military air.

The young McCahill twins, Marie and Marguerite, who are pictured above, have been tripped up at last. They have always dressed exactly alike, even to accessories. But you'll notice in the picture that their shoes aren't alike!

Thomas and William Laughlin, of Pittsburgh and New York, have a hobby in common—taking snapshots. They are among the best known snapshot contributors to Town and Country, the society magazine.

Bishops Address State Meeting Of C. D. A.

PHILADELPHIA, May 23.—(AP.)—Bishop William J. Hafey, of Raleigh, N. C., addressing delegates to the convention of Pennsylvania Catholic Daughters of America, said last night, that modern women will not attain their ideals by centering ambitions in themselves, but that they will find the true vocation of their natures in motherhood and social service.

In a speech welcoming the delegates, Mayor J. Hampton Moore warned against "the idler, imposter and dawdler" in the administration of charity.

Other speakers were Miss Frances Maher, of Kane, state regent; Mrs. Anne Brennan, of Yeadon, chairman of the Philadelphia district, and Bishop John Mark Gannon, of Erie, and state chaplain.

Progress Reported Despite Slump P. T. A.'s Told

SEATTLE, May 23.—(AP.)—Characterizing the parent-teacher associations of the United States as "protecting the big interest of the nation itself—childhood," Mrs. Hugh Bradford, of Sacramento, Cal., president, gave her annual report at the opening of the thirty-seventh annual convention of the National Congress of Parents and Teachers here yesterday.

Despite difficulties encountered in the past year, such as closed schools and loss of memberships, progress has been made, she stated.

The convention, with 760 delegates registered from every state in the Union, will close Friday.

Emily Weinberg Names Sunday for Wedding

Miss Emily Weinberg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Louis Weinberg, of Wightman street, has chosen Sunday as the day for her marriage to E. Milton Cohen, of Uniontown, to take place in the Weinberg home in the presence of the families.

After the wedding dinner, Mr. Cohen and his bride will go to New York, to sail on May 31 on the Orient for a honeymoon in the West Indies.

State B. P. W. Clubs Elect New Officers

Officers elected at the annual convention of the Pennsylvania Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs are: President, Miss Susan Given Rhodes, of Columbia; vice president, Mrs. Helen Thompson, Greenville; recording secretary, Miss Inez Fitch, Corry; treasurer, Miss Nancy Bechtol, New Castle.

BUOYANT EVENING FROCKS TO PROMOTE STAG LINE APPEAL

SOME of the best and some of the worst evenings in the world are to be had at country club dances. You can go to the Saturday night festivities in a dress that has panicked many smart dinners recently and fall flat as a pancake.

IF YOU don't want to be a wall flower, get a dress with a certain special snap about it. The dead simple, terribly soigne gown that was a riot in the front of an opera box is wasted on the stag line of the golf and tennis club. Go for a funny color, or a gay, amusing cut.

WE SUGGEST these two models because they're sheer material made over taffeta slips. They "whish" as you dance by. Simply divine for a tango! Everyhandsome beau on the line will inquire who the belle is when he hears you sweep past.

THE material of the outer skirt is sheer, a version of organdie or stiffened chiffon. The one on the left is printed blue and white, so fine as to give a monotone effect. The one on the right has several cute tricks about it. To begin with, it's brown—a color which until recently was considered drab for evening; but lately it's been proved that it can be thoroughly seductive. The cuffs of the jacket are white pique, which adds just the right touch. The frock itself is completely simple, low and V in the back, higher and U in the front.

An exciting note could be added by a quick raid on the garden. Pin a cluster of whatever white flowers are in season at the base of the round neck and it will strike just the right note. Real flowers can vary many of your summer frocks.

Club Federation Works on Main Program

RICHMOND, Va., May 23.—(AP.)—Two sightseeing tours were arranged today as part of a varied round of business sessions, speeches and entertainment for the delegates to the fifteenth council meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs.

The delegates are visitors, representing women's clubs in all 48 states, turned today to the main program of their four-day meeting, after an opening day devoted to conferences among officers and trustees and addresses of welcome.

Mrs. John M. Phillips, of Pittsburgh, first vice president of the State Federation of Pennsylvania Women, is attending the meeting.

Adult Education Group Told of Farm Movement

AMHERST, Mass., May 23.—(AP.)—Adult education in rural America, Benson Y. Landis yesterday told the American Association for Adult Education, needs to recognize more fully the kinship with movements in urban America and in rural and urban groups of other countries.

Landis, who is chairman of the association's committee on rural education, discussed the findings of a national study of rural adult education recently completed. The study revealed that more persons are living on farms now than ever before in the history of the nation and that between 1920 and 1930 the rural non-farm population gained at a rate more rapidly than that of the nation as a whole.

Party Saturday For Student Loan Fund

The Student Loan Fund for women students of Duquesne University will benefit from a party to be held by the University Women's Guild, Saturday afternoon, in the auditorium of the school of music on the campus.

Mrs. William C. Eichenlaub, of Edgewood Acres, Guild President, is general chairman.

A card party for the benefit of St. Philomena's Church is being held in the church auditorium this evening. Mrs. P. J. Curtin is general chairman.

Poetry Society's Salon Poem Awards Announced

Awards for the anonymously-read poems at the Poetry Society's salon in Mrs. Marie Tello Phillips Yeagle's home last night went to Mrs. Stuart McFarland, Miss Pearl Sanford and Mrs. Chester P. Johnston.

Eight different composers who have set Mrs. Yeagle's verses to music were represented on the program given by Mrs. Jeanne Mahey Smith and Miss Dorothy Macwilliams. Miss Mary Parsons and Miss Eleanor Elderkin accompanied the singers.

There were brief talks by a number of the guests and the hostess read a paper on "Modern Paganism."

Mark Shields to Speak Before 25th Ward Women

Mark Shields, political editor of the Sun-Telegraph, will speak before the Twenty-fifth Ward League of Women Voters tonight in the North Side Y. M. C. A. He will discuss "The Political Situation in Pittsburgh."

Sterling Court to Hold Benefit Dance Tomorrow

Sterling Court, Order of the Amaranth, will hold a benefit dance and card party tomorrow evening at 9 o'clock in the Century Building, Seventh street.

Pittsburghers in St. Vincent's Play

The Dramatic Association of St. Vincent College will present "The Mystery Man," a three-act play, in the college auditorium, Latrobe, May 29. This will be the association's final play of the year. Edwin Hirt and Thomas O'Connor, of Pittsburgh, and Alex Ward, of Johnstown, will play the main roles.

SCIENTIST tells Screen Stars WHY this soap is such a wonderful aid in keeping skin YOUTHFUL

"LUX Toilet Soap actually contains precious elements skin itself has and must have to stay youthful," Scientist says!

Small wonder that this soap is used by 9 out of 10 screen stars—has been for years—to keep skin young looking!

FOR years hundreds of Hollywood actresses have known WHAT Lux Toilet Soap does. That's why 686 out of 694 of the important movie actresses use this beauty soap regularly: It keeps their skin so soft . . . smooth . . . young looking!

The Secret of Youthful Skin

Now scientists tell why it does these things. Contained in this soap—they explain—are certain precious elements that skin itself has—and must have to stay young!

You're born with certain precious elements in your skin. Nature, herself, puts them there—in abundance, when skin is young. But little by little as the years go by, these precious elements are depleted . . . Almost imperceptibly, day by day, skin ages, becomes rough . . . dry . . . old looking!

Don't turn, discouraged, from your mirror and say, "I suppose it can't be helped!" For science now gives you this news: You can check the loss of those precious elements!

Scientists attest the fact that Lux Toilet Soap . . . gentle, completely free from harshness, quickly soluble, and containing precious elements skin itself has . . . is an unquestionable aid in keeping the skin young looking . . . soft and smooth.

No wonder so many famous screen stars have found from years of personal experience that Lux Toilet Soap is so marvelous for their skin. No wonder it is the official soap in all the big film studios!

A Younger Looking, Lovelier YOU

SCIENCE tells you that pure, safe Lux Toilet Soap actually contains precious elements all skin must have to look young. These elements are found in the skin itself—an abundance in fresh, youthful skin, less in skin that is growing old, unlovely.

MILLIONS of women (and men) everywhere confirm Hollywood's experience.

Prove to yourself how soft, smooth and young this soap will keep your skin.

"It certainly does keep the skin young looking"... says Elizabeth Love, Lakeland, Fla.

"I've been using Lux Toilet Soap for ever so long. From the very first I discovered that what the Hollywood stars say about this fine soap is true. It certainly does keep the skin young looking. And not only that, but it seemed to me in no time at all my skin became much clearer and softer. I certainly wouldn't use any other soap for my skin!"

THERE'S ONE SURE WAY TO MODERNIZE YOUR HOME

Natural gas is not only a modern fuel—it is a modernizing fuel as well. Its use, wherever heat is required, will do more than anything else to put the mark of up-to-dateness on your home.

The first and most important step in modernizing your home is to install Automatic Gas Heat—with a gas boiler or furnace, or conversion burner. Natural Gas heat is clean, convenient, healthful. It requires no attention. It works automatically, giving you a constant temperature that safeguards health for all the family. It frees you forever from the dread drudgery of furnace tending, with its dirt and dust and ashes and cellar steps to climb. It lets you enjoy life and gives you the carefree leisure you've always wanted but never could get with older fashioned fuels. And at the present low gas rates, the cost of automatic gas heat is substantially reduced.

OTHER NATURAL GAS APPLIANCES YOU WILL WANT FOR COMPLETE MODERNIZATION OF YOUR HOME ARE—

A New and Modern Automatic Water Heater—for abundant hot water when you want it, without visiting the cellar.

A New Electrolux Air Cooled Gas Refrigerator—for automatic refrigeration that is absolutely silent, and costs only 2c per day.

A Natural Gas Ironer and a Laundry Dryer—to save time and work and make you independent of outside weather.

These Charming People

"HERE'S ONE THAT WILL MAKE YOU CRY," writes W. K. "The guy who is guilty of the so-called practical joke thought he was being amusing. But his trick proved tragic for one of the victims. He is better described as the cast-off sweetheart of a movie actress.

"The papers said that she flew to New York from Hollywood so that she could have a holiday dinner with her mother. That was one of those movie press agent tricks. The fact is that she hasn't been speaking to her mother for a year or since she achieved fame. This fact enabled the cast-off heart (who was in Hollywood at the time) to play this unfunny joke on the gal, and the parent in N. Y.

"He sent the mother a wire, on Mother's Day, no less! Signing the actress' handle to it. In it were sugary words telling the mother that she was responsible for all her success. Naturally, mother, thinking that she had been received back into her estranged daughter's heart, immediately took the next plane to the coast.

"Upon arriving there, however, the door of the daughter's shack was slammed right in her face! By the daughter, who, of course, did not know about the cruel joke! If you print it, Winchell—he may see it—and maybe it'll give him the shudders as it did those of us out here, who know the inside of it all."

"HERE'S ONE THAT WILL THROW YOU, WALTER. A feller about town kept after Mack Sennett, of the Hollywood harems, for three years—trying to get Sennett to let him have permission to name a race horse after him. Sennett turned deaf. He didn't like the idea, at all. Recently he acquiesced (agreed, to you!) and Mack Sennett the gee gee ran at Pimlico twice last week—winning both starts. He paid 8 to 1 and 4 to 1 and Sennett was on him each time for a century note—winning $1,200 for $200.—Joe R."

Well, that just goes to show you. They named a new two-year-old after our Walda and she, too, ran twice at Jamaica last week—coming in fifth both times.

"DEAR WALTER WINCHELL: Your tip recently about Technocracy hitting the front pages shortly was an accurate scoop. Let me give you some more dope on it which is absolutely true.

"After Howard Scott was booted out of Columbia in January, Bassett Jones (one of the smartest mathematicians in the country) continued his research. His report was so hot that the Columbia Press dropped it. Richard Walsh (John Day prexy), who is an ardent technocrat and member of the Continental Committee on Technocracy, grabbed the Jones report, and will bring it out under the John Day imprint in June.

"The newspapers are going to get a story soon about the formation of a national Technocracy outfit, with five regional divisions and some 80 local branches. That's on the level. Within two months they expect to have 500,000 members, and, Winchell, the program they are backing is the most radical thing ever foisted on the American public. It puts Russia in the pink tea class. These babies (and there are some pretty good names on the list) are asking that the public 'legally acquire' all of the means of production and distribution and all natural resources of the entire continent. Also, they want engineers and technicians to be put in charge of running everything 'for the benefit of all.' They want everybody to contribute his time and services co-operatively in order to 'vastly increase' the standard of living and to acquire leisure.

"This gang has worked under cover for six months. It has money and is going to start soon on a lot of propaganda ventures. The farm strike and riot news from the mid-West is mild to what these boys are setting out to put across. They're in earnest and hope to capture the underdogs everywhere. Winchell, this gang will put Communism off the map!"

"DEAR MR. W.: Far be it from me to embarrass you—but when you come out as boldly as you did recently for James J. Walker for Mayor of New York City—you are badly in need of advice.

"I am also one of the army of Walker admirers. Yes, I still am. But hasn't anyone even whispered to you exactly why James cannot be mayor of this town again? James has been a bad boy and he is done here politically. Stop wasting your time boosting him and keep us all interested in the trivia you manage to do so well.—Yale Clubman."

I only know the town is not the same.

"PROF. WINCHELL: One of these days when you feel like pasting up things that you have a lukewarm affection for—use this and get out of the musty office early. It's one of the grander stories which the papers buried—and here's all of it. I met you once in a hurry. You wouldn't remember me. It's about Gen. Grant's cigar.

"During the early days of the Civil War, the General, then comparatively obscure, passed through a small mid-western town on his way to combat. The townsfolk made much of Grant. In return, he signed autographs (they had them in those days, too,) shook many hands, and generally made himself agreeable. To one fortunate local, a humble storekeeper, he presented a cigar in full view of many of his envious neighbors.

"The merchant decided not to smoke the cigar. He put it in a glass case, and placed it in the store as a souvenir of Grant's visit. As the General's fame grew in the years that followed, the storekeeper enhanced the cigar incident. By the end of the war, to hear him tell it, he and the General, then the national hero, had been inseparable.

"His prestige increased by leaps and bounds and his store prospered. Through it all, there was the cigar, a concrete symbol of intimacy with the great man. People came to look at the rolled up tobacco leaf, and remained to buy his wares. The town grew, too, until it became a thriving metropolis. Our friend became wealthy and after Grant died the brief meeting became even more fanciful.

"Before he died, the once-lowly merchant founded a college, which likewise became important in the community. His sons were trustees, and after they died, their sons became trustees. And so we come to the present day. The cigar, still preserved under glass, occupied an honored position in the university library, for all the scholars to see. One day the officials realized it was time to celebrate an anniversary of the founding. A program was laid out, to be climaxed with a huge banquet at which all the community biggies were to be present.

"And then someone had a brilliant idea. At the end of the dinner, he argued, the most appropriate gesture possible would be for the oldest grandson to smoke the cigar. The fateful moment arrived, and the gorged but expectant guests waited with bated breath while the weed was removed from its case.

"Someone lit a match, the grandson put the cigar to his lips, lit it, and puffed a moment. The scene was so dramatic that none dared raise a murmur. But what? Gen. Grant's cigar exploded with a bang, all over the startled grandson's amazed pan. Wherever the General was, I'm sure he thought the laugh was worth waiting for . . ."

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., May 23.—Disappointment is in store for the two-gun amazon from Texas and the Kansas husband-killer who wrote to Fox, seeking to play the lead in "The Worst Woman in Paris." Myrna Loy gets the role.

Myrna Loy

This decision ends a search, which not only inspired a large number of freak letters, but which involved negotiations at one time or another, with many of Hollywood's most famous stars.

In addition to Myrna, Ina Claire, Claudette Colbert and Tallulah Bankhead were mentioned for the role.

Now that Fox has made its choice, Monta Bell can start preparations to direct his own story. Briefly, it's the adventure of the "Worst Woman in Paris," who becomes the best woman in Kansas.

Sam Behrman and Sonya Levien are getting it ready for the screen.

It's an amusing story Mary Boland tells about her colored maid. Some time back, Miss Boland was summoned to the coast. Her maid, at the time, had never been out of New York, and was dubious about traveling. She finally consented, and boarded a canal-bound boat with her mistress.

Rough weather was encountered and the maid was sick a good part of the voyage. Then, arriving in Los Angeles, Miss Boland found a wire summoning her back to New York. She grabbed the first airplane, but was forced down halfway. There was nothing for it but to take a fast train.

Mary Boland

It was 12 hours later when a still-dazed maid timidly approached her mistress.

"Miss Boland," she quavered, "could you please tell me where we been?"

The eternally impatient Charles Bickford is offering to turn over his garage and service station (opposite the M-G-M studio) to anyone who will undertake the operation. The red-headed actor says he'd rather let it go free than worry about finding a purchaser of his interest.

The big basket of fruits, cigarets, etc., that was delivered to Douglas Fairbanks, Jr., at the train was from Joan Crawford. Later, while Doug listened to the clicking rails, Joan went dancing at the Beverly Wilshire with Bob Abbot, a good-looking young man from Boston.

Good for a laugh is Mae West's reply to the New Jersey skipper who wrote asking permission to name a tug-boat after the blonde star.

On every side, they'll tell you that La Garbo comes back from Sweden with a greatly improved English vocabulary. . . .

Maurice Chevalier threw a big party on the farewell night of the Xavier Cuban tango orchestra at the Cocoanut Grove. . . Have you heard Ted Fiorito's record of "Sweetheart Darlin'" Herb Stothart's melody from Marion Davies' new picture, "Peg O' My Heart?" . . . Estelle Taylor has just made another recording, too.

Marion Davies plays the title part in "Peg O' My Heart," with Onslow Stevens as the leading man. It will open in the Penn Friday. The story is that of an Irish girl who inherits a fortune and goes to live with a snooty family. It is a talkie version of a famous stage hit.

"The Little Giant," starring Edward G. Robinson, is a screen comedy coming to the Stanley Friday. The star, as "Bugs" Ahearn, figures the booze racket is all washed up, so he buys a partnership in a bond business and lot of excitement.

Nancy Carroll, Paul Lukas and Frank Morgan have the principal roles in "The Kiss Before the Mirror," part of the double feature bill in the Davis and Sheridan Square Friday. The story develops from the reaction of the attorney for the defense in a murder case.

Subscription To Open

The American Theater Society will continue to offer plays on a subscription basis next season. Subscription blanks have arrived at the local headquarters of the organization in the Nixon Building, and can be procured by application to Mrs. H. C. Bughman, Jr.

A number of the cities have been dropped from the list and only those which were definitely felt to be distinct centers of appreciation and support for the best dramatic fare are being offered membership in the American Theater Society for the season of 1933-34. Six plays will be offered, three to be productions of the Theater Guild and three to be selected from the plays of other producers. One may subscribe for the entire series of six or separately for either series of three. The subscription for six plays, including tax, will be $13.20 and half of that for either series of three, bringing the average to $2.20 per ticket, a saving of 55 cents on each.

A number of former subscribers have already written in desiring to renew their subscriptions.

By Mark Hellinger

Success.

SINCE YOU have nothing better to do at the present moment, you might as well consider the story of two people who have made a go of marriage. You might tell me that such a story must naturally be fiction. But let me respond by saying that such a thing can actually happen. True, not often. But sometimes.

These two have been married about eight years. He met her when he was trying to gain a foothold on the theatrical ladder. And he fell head-over-heels in love with her.

When the boy came along she was going around with a man well along in the sixties. The elderly gent adored the little lady and spent money upon her as though he had a private key to the mint.

The boy knew about the situation. But when he fell, nothing made any difference. He begged the girl to give up the old bird and become his wife.

She shook her head.

"Im too wise for that, Frank," she asserted. "I like you a very great deal. As a matter of fact if I were forced—I'd be glad to say that I love you.

"But—and this is a mighty big but—I'm not going to jump into any marriage. Im living very comfortably just now and there isn't much more that I could ask for. I know that I'm not the most respectable girl in the world, but who cares about that? When you have the dough, people bow whether you're respectable or not."

She stopped for a moment. Then—

"There's something else, too, Frank," she went on. "You know exactly what I am. You love me now, but would you continue to feel the same way in, let's say, five years?

"I don't think so. And I'm afraid of it. I'm afraid that we'll fight and that you'll throw my past in my face. I couldn't stand for that, Frank. And I'm afraid to risk it."

The boy swore that such a thing would never happen.

"I love you," he cried fervently. "It's not what used to be. I'll make you the happiest girl in the world if you'll make me the happiest man in the world. Won't you marry me?"

The girl shook her head. The boy persisted.

"Ever?" he asked.

The girl shrugged her shoulders.

"I'm not wise enough to tell you that," she murmured. "I told you before that I was very fond of you. Maybe some day. . . ."

The boy stood up.

"Listen, honey," he stated. "You're going to be my wife. You can have your old guy all to yourself for another six months. I'm going to drop out of your life for that much time.

"But when I come back, you're going to make up your mind to marry me. That's all I'm going to say right now. Goodby."

He kissed her. And he left . . .

The boy kept his word. Well, he almost kept his word. He stayed away for two months instead of six. And that's not bad for a guy in love.

When he called at her home, he demanded an answer immediately. She smiled and kissed him. Then she grew serious.

"Frank," she asked, "Are you sure you love me?"

His answer was too long to be printed here. You have a rough idea of what it was, anyhow.

"Well, then," the girl went on, "I've made up my mind. I know now that I love you, too. Very, very much. And if you're sure that you'll never regret it, I'll give up all I have and become your wife."

Not more than two weeks later they became man and wife . . .

The years that have passed since their marriage have been splendid years for both of them. The boy struggled onward in the theatrical business and finally landed a hit show. He had three companies out at the same time and made a young fortune in one season. A number of fortunate investments in Wall street didn't do him any harm either.

Then, too, they have been extremely wise in their home life. What was past—was past.

He kidded her about only one man. And that was the old bird who had been rushing her before her marriage. Both of them referred to him as "Jonesy" when they spoke of him. And they spoke of him often. The husband kidded her about having gone with a man old enough to be her grandfather. And the wife never grew angry.

For these, you see, were sensible people. No wild, unreasoning jealousy. No stupid outbursts about things that had gone before. Just two people perfectly mated and ideally happy. Lucky . . .

A few months ago the boy decided to buy a boat. He was one of the very few who had enjoyed a prosperous season. He had plenty of coin in the bank. And he decided to spend some of it on something that his wife would enjoy.

She loved boats. He knew that. She had never asked him for one, because she felt it might be too expensive. And he decided to wait.

But now there was no use waiting any longer. He had the dough and he had the inclination. So he went out and bought himself a beautiful yacht that had been built some years before. It was a vessel that had been bought and resold several times. But what difference did that make? Even as it stood, the boat was worth $100,000.

When everything was in readiness, the boy called for his wife and told her he had a little surprise for her.

"It's something you've always wanted," he smiled, "but something that you never wanted to ask for. Now I've got it. Put your hat on and we'll go."

And out they went. An hour's drive and they were in a very exclusive yacht club. They walked together to a motor boat and were ridden to the yacht the boy had bought.

"It's yours, honey," said the boy. "I bought it for you. Because I want you to be happy."

The girl looked around her. A funny light came into her eyes. The tears welled. The husband was startled. He asked her what the trouble was. And she took his arm.

"Dearest," she responded softly. "Life's the strangest game in the world. I've told everything that's ever happened to me—and I'm not going to stop now. I'm too happy.

"This is the second time this boat was bought for me. Jonsey had it built for me ten years ago and I picked out all the decorations and all the furniture. I know the boat backward and forward.

"When I decided to marry you I told Jonsey I couldn't take the boat. Now it has come to me—legitimately. And I'll love it a million times more than I ever could before." . . .

CHURCHMEN AIR 'TROUBLE' AT 3RD U. P.

The case for and against hearing the petition to investigate trouble in the Third Presbyterian Church of which the Rev. Dr. William M. Woodfin is pastor, is being deliberated by a commission appointed by the Monongahela Presbytery.

Members of the congregation for and against the pastor had an opportunity to present their case last night to the commission in a meeting at Third Church.

No charges have been made against Dr. Woodfin, the entire question now before the commission being whether or not to entertain the petition for an investigation signed by 273 of his parishioners.

NOT UNUSUAL

The naming of the commission is not an unusual step in church procedure where similar matters of order are involved, according to the Rev. Dr. W. J. Reid, of the First Church of Pittsburgh, on whose motion the jury was named.

On the commission are the Rev. Dr. A. Gordon MacLennan, of Shadyside Church; the Rev. Dr. E. C. McCown, of Mt. Lebanon Church; the Rev. Dr. George A. Long, of Homewood Church; the Rev. Dr. A. R. Robinson, of the Sixth United Presbyterian Church; the Rev. Dr. J. M. McQuilkin, of Carnegie Church, and two elders, Frank H. Davis, of the Second Church of Wilkinsburg, and James S. McKibbin, of the First United Presbyterian Church.

STORMY MEETING

The commission organized yesterday following a stormy meeting of the presbytery attended by many of the church laymen. The commission will have, unlimited time to investigate the trouble at Third Church, officials said.

One of the first duties of the jury under the church law, according to statements at the meeting, will be to affect a reconciliation if possible.

Dr. Woodfin's trouble at Third Church came to a head at an ecclesiastical meeting May 3, at which he denounced the church board of elders for holding secret meetings. The congregation gave him a vote of confidence, 276 to 86.

ALL ELDERS SIGN

The petition for an investigation presented yesterday by J. Allison Reed, an elder of Third Church, contained the names of 273 members. It included all 12 elders and five of 12 trustees.

In the petition, the situation at the church was described as "unfortunate and deplorable."

Dr. Woodfin attended the presbytery meeting and sat silently through the debate. He has been pastor of the church for nine years.

GROUPS HERE PRESS FIGHT ON SWEAT SHOPS

Groups interested in social legislation went to bat today against the Republican State organization in an effort to bring about elimination of sweat shops and improvement in working conditions in the state.

Several Pittsburgh organizations were represented at a conference with Gov. Pinchot in Harrisburg to ask the Governor to call a special session of the Legislature to enact minimum wage, shorter working hours and old age pension laws.

The ministers of Western Pennsylvania yesterday addressed an appeal to the Governor to call such a session.

CHALLENGES MARTIN

Dr. C. R. Daugherty, chairman of the education committee of the League for Social Justice, took issue with the statement of Gen. Edward Martin, Republican state chairman, that Pennsylvania has adequate laws to prevent child labor.

Gen. Martin, addressing the Hungry Club yesterday, denied there were sweatshops "in any alarming numbers," and said the Governor has the power to correct conditions.

Dr. Daugherty said a minimum wage law was necessary to insure against exploitation of women and children in industry. He pointed out that elimination of the State Bureau of Industrial Relations, as provided in the Legislature's appropriation bill, took from the government the personnel and money necessary to enforce existing laws.

RALLY ARRANGED

Stephen Raushenbaush, head of the bureau, is scheduled to speak here Thursday night at a public mass meeting sponsored by the Pennsylvania Security League, the League for Social Justice and the Unemployment Citizens League. Dr. Ralph Turner, chairman of the Pittsburgh Committee of the Pennsylvania Security League, will address the Hungry Club next Monday.

Miss Esther Hawes, general secretary of the Metropolitan Y. W. C. A., and Charles T. Douds, secretary of the Pennsylvania Committee for Old Age Security, were in Harrisburg today for the conference with the Governor.

He was the last defense witness in his impeachment trial before the Senate.

Church Players Present Comedy

Contract Bridge -:- HOW TO PLAY and HOW TO WIN

By JOSEPHINE CULBERTSON

Approach—Not Drive

Users of direct methods in bidding—those who bid for games immediately when they pick up hands of supposed game strength, and thus exclude both opponents and partner from the bidding—are, generally speaking, playing a losing game. Preemptive game bids should be reserved for hands in which the element of defense against adverse bidding is almost lacking and in the play of which the Declarer is not interested in information from the opponents as to the possible distributional and honor strength they may hold.

Recently, in a Duplicate game at a popular club in New York, I saw a very interesting example of how approach methods permit the opponents to disclose valuable information to the Declarer and also of how the direct method prevents them from shedding any light on the accurate play of the hand.

The hand in question was the following:

South, Dealer.

North and South vulnerable.

| | | |
|---|---|---|
| | ♠ Q85 ♡ AQJ7 ◇ 96 ♣ AQJ10 | |
| ♠ 94 ♡ 102 ◇ A87 ♣ K76542 | | ♠ 106 ♡ K96543 ◇ J1052 ♣ 8 |
| | ♠ AKJ732 ♡ 8 ◇ KQ43 ♣ 93 | |

The contracts reached by the players on this hand were varied and unusual. The correct bidding, by which the Small Slam contract was reached, was the following:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♠ (1) | 2 ♣ (2) | Double (3) | 2 ♡ (4) |
| 3 ♠ (5) | Pass | 6 ♠ (6) | Pass |
| Pass | Pass | | |

1—This hand, even with a strong spade suit, is a much better bid of one than of three or four. If partner holds a tremendous hand, the exchange of information may make it possible to reach a Slam. If opponents have suits they desire to bid, they should be given an opportunity to bid them.

2—A perfectly natural overcall. The hand contains a six-card suit and 1½ honor-tricks.

3—North's double is obvious. It is, of course, for penalties.

4—While East has less than 1 honor-trick, he realizes that even a contract of two clubs with his hand will probably be very badly set.

5—South's hand is so unbalanced as to suggest that an effort be made for game rather than to permit North to double the heart bid. Therefore, the Jump Rebid of his own suit.

6—There is no reason to temporize. North holds more than adequate trump support for the rebid spade suit and, on the bidding, South must be marked with a trick in diamonds. The club holding suggests that South will be able to dispose of any losing hearts he may hold through a successful finesse in that suit. It is obvious that the calls of East and West have facilitated and not retarded the proper development of the hand by the North and South pair. The superiority of the Approach over the Drive is clearly demonstrated.

| South | North |
|---|---|
| Pass | |

The fact that there is a Slam in the hand, easily reachable, is a strong argument against South's preemptive bid. The further fact that North, despite his preemptive bid, bids the Slam does not make South's bid any better. Where these bids occurred South, of course, was forced to play the hand without the illuminating information given by adverse overcalls. Hence, as the hand was actually played, the contract was defeated.

West opened the Ace of diamonds and then led a low club. South was faced with an immediate decision upon the finesse. He reasoned wrongly that the West hand did not hold the King of clubs, and that his best chance was to finesse the heart and, if this finesse won to discard his losing club on the high heart in Dummy. However, following this line of action proved disastrous, as East won the trick. The defeat, however, was held to 1 trick, due to the fact that East had held originally only one club.

Today's Question.

You have opened the bidding with one spade and your partner has responded with three clubs. What do you bid, holding:

♠ AQ942 ♡ 7 ◇ K1096 ♣ K10 8

Answer: Three spades. The suit is only a shaded rebiddable suit and the hand is a minimum as regards honor-tricks but the distribution warrants some slight encouraging bid.

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Not Announced

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My sister is engaged to a young man, and they are to be married this summer. They haven't announced their engagement.

My parents and the young man's parents have not met. Is it proper for my parents to invite his parents to our home first, or is it correct for his parents to invite my parents?

N.

The really proper thing is for the young man's parents to come to see your sister and your mother directly after their son has told them of the engagement. This is an important and significant visit—this visit of welcoming the bride-to-be into the family. But perhaps the young man has not told them yet of the engagement. If he has, and if it is evident that the parents of the young man are not planning to make this visit without an invitation, the next best thing is for your parents to invite them to come to your home, perhaps to dine at some specified time.

Quiet Wedding Reception

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1—Will you please tell me if there is a certain date officially looked upon as the beginning of the summer formal season?

2—I am to be married very quietly in the home of the clergyman because of a difference in religion. However, I would like to have some sort of reception after the ceremony, and I am wondering if it would be correct to have the reception at some hotel that evening and serve a buffet lunch? If that is not looked upon as proper, will you please suggest what the correct procedure would be under the circumstances?

S.

1—There is no official date for this. It depends a great deal on the weather!

2—Your plan to have the reception at some hotel is quite correct, and to have a buffet supper served. Or perhaps you could plan to have a small reception, with buffet supper, at your own home. Either is correct.

DEMOCRATS AIM AT STATE AND CITY CONTROL

Lawrence Spurs Party, Lashes G. O. P. Rule At Testimonial

Democrats today linked as a joint goal seizure of the Pittsburgh city government this fall and the state government next year, following a speech last night by County Chairman David L. Lawrence in the Fort Pitt Hotel at a testimonial honoring the seven Allegheny County members of the recently-adjourned Legislature.

Lawrence contended that better city government in Pittsburgh must follow better government in Harrisburg, noting that Pittsburgh has been deprived of home rule and must appeal to the Legislature for permission to do many things of a purely local nature.

HITS MELLON, GRUNDY

The Allegheny County chairman attacked the Republican leadership of W. L. Mellon and Joseph R. Grundy, and asserted pressure from this joint party control dictated defeat of measures in the interest of citizens of Pittsburgh and the state at large.

He struck particularly at defeat of the Pittsburgh city manager bill, old age pensions, minimum wage bills and measures which would have reduced the working hours of women and children in industry.

In attacking Republican leadership Lawrence made no reference to Senator James J. Coyne, the lone Allegheny County vote in the upper branch of the legislature against the old age pensions, and chief opponent of the city manager bill. Coyne is regarded as the chief professional political backer of the Republican mayor and council which the Democrats will seek to oust.

CAMPAIGN KEYNOTE

Lawrence's speech, broadcast through the state, was regarded as the keynote not only of the coming municipal campaign, when a mayor and five city councilmen are to be elected, but set the pace for Democrats in the battle next year when they will endeavor to capture the governorship and the Legislature.

With him on the platform sat Representatives John J. Kane, John L. Powers, Clair E. McGinnis, John J. O'Keefe, George V. Beech, James L. Quinn and Charles Harmuth, the representatives in whose honor the meeting was called.

Kane, according to Democratic plans, is to be one of the five councilmanic candidates.

RAPS MELLONS, GRUNDY

Lawrence asserted that this seven, as well as a majority of the 65 members elected as Democrats in the House and the seven Democratic Senators, fought for advanced legislation which was blocked by the Mellon-Grundy influence. Most of Lawrence's speech was devoted to future plans rather than a review of the Legislature.

He charged that public utilities were protected by the Republican

Evelyn Nesbit Tells Of Stage Setting for Thaw-White Tragedy

SYNOPSIS

Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, writing her autobiography as a lesson to other girls that defiance of moral laws and conventions leads only to unhappiness and tragedy, has told in previous chapters about her pursuit by Harry Thaw, her confession to Thaw of her love for Stanford White, her marriage to Harry, and her year of married life at the Thaw mansion in Pittsburgh.

By EVELYN NESBIT THAW

(Copyright.)

CHAPTER XVII.

The year 1906!

The year in which a tragedy was to rock the world—a tragedy which was to make notorious the names of Harry Thaw, blacken the memory of the genius, Stanford White, and paint with scarlet letters the little girl from Tarentum, Pa., known as Evelyn Nesbit Thaw, then 20 years of age. Through the early months of the year the stage was being set.

One by one members of the Thaw clan moved out of "Lyndhurst." Mother Thaw, throughout the spring, was making preparations for a trip to Europe on a freighter. She liked traveling that way.

Harry, to my great relief, intended sailing with his mother, but balked at the idea of a cattle boat. Cows weren't among his weaknesses, and luxury, display and "putting on the dog" were.

Early in June we left Pittsburgh and went directly to the Lorraine Hotel at Forty-fifth street and Fifth avenue, where his mother was also stopping.

In New York, Thaw spent his afternoons at the Whist Club—so I thought at the time. In the evenings we dined at Delmonico's, or Martin's, the Beaux Arts, Sherry's, etc., and then went to the theater. A few days went by, and Mother Thaw sailed.

At that time there were two men in New York—friends of Thaw's—who often dined or supped with us. Harry made a great fuss over one of them.

I did not know until later that Harry's great interest in him was caused by the fact that some years before in California, he had killed a man under the unwritten law and had been promptly acquitted. Public opinion had been with him from the start.

Thaw told me nothing of this and I didn't know anything about it until I read it in the papers later. He was a pleasant gentleman and he never discussed any such things before me.

The only women friends of former days with whom Thaw permitted me to associate were a married woman and my former girl friend, his spy, because, as Thaw said:

"One is a decent married woman, and the other is a fine,

DEPUTIES SERVE VOTE SUBPENAS

In order to serve nearly 1,000 subjoenas in the Federal grand jury investigation of alleged vote frauds in thei Thirtieth and Thirty-second Congressional districts, Deputy United States Marshal Walter W. Meyer today appointed six special deputies.

They hope to complete the roundup of witnesses within the next ten days. A special session of the grand jury has been called for June 12 to investigate last fall's election contest between Mrs. Anne E. Felix and Michael J. Muldowney and between Twing Brooks and Edmund F. Erk.

Virtually all of the members of the electon boards as well as many individual voters are to be called. The case is to be presented by Attorney Earl F. Reed, special prosecutor.

GUARD AGAINST REDS AT TRIAL

When the trial of Bleddyn C. Thomas, 34, charged "h fraudulently obtaining naturalization, was resumed today before Federal Judge R. M. Gibson, city policemen and detectives were again on guard in the corridors of the courthouse.

They were there to assist government secret service operatives and deputy marshals to frustrate any attempt of a Communistic demonstration in behalf of the defendant.

SLEUTHS SCAN ASSESSORS' BOOKS

Dozen Districts Under Eye of Riordan's Investigators

A checkup was to be started today on registration in at least a dozen districts in boroughs and townships by investigators under Leo A. Riordan, to determine whether lists have been padded with aliens and phantoms. Register assessors' books for districts in 13 boroughs and townships were held back by the Elections Bureau yesterday when turned in by the Assessors.

Riordan's men, in questioning Assessors, learned that in several cases they had let other persons do their work and fill out the lists of qualified voters. The checkup will last for at least two weeks.

The districts under suspicion include Braddock, Rankin, Homestead, McKees Rocks, Ross Township, Sharpsburg, Etna, Millvale, Carnegie, Leet Township, Kilbuck Township, Munhall and Stowe Township.

With 21 of the 479 districts still not reported on, the registration books show a 100 per cent increase in the Democratic registration, while the Republicans showed a decrease of about 20 per cent.

DEMOCRATS SHOW BIG GAIN

In 1932 there were but 25,908 Democrats registered from the boroughs and townships, and the total this year is 49,790. Last year the Republican total was 266,180, and for this year it is 223,937.

Several thousand persons in the boroughs and townships will be deprived of their right to vote in the primaries through registering under the Communists, Independent, Square Deal or Liberal banner. More than 3,000 others also will not be permitted to vote at the primaries because they gave no party affiliations to the register assessors. However, the party affiliation can be changed July 19, when the register assessors sit in their respective districts.

In spite of the fact that the Democratic registration was unusually high in all parts of the county, the 722 voters who registered in the second district of the Second ward, Homestead, went solid Republican. This is one of the districts being checked by county investigators.

VOTING STRENGTH CUT

The first district of the first ward, McKees Rocks, which in previous years had a vote of more than 1,000 came in with but 311 qualified voters. In 1931 there were 1,247 registered in the one district, with 165 from one house. In 1932 the total registration was but 482 and the county investigators succeeded in having the court reduce this to 362.

William Ramsey, the register assessor for the McKees Rocks district, admitted, Riordan declared, that he did not write his own book in 1931 and 1932, but said he had done his own work for this year. His book was lifted for check.

John W. Barnas, the assessor for the Third District of the Third Ward, Homestead, admitted, Riordan said, that he had permitted his daughter to make the house to house canvass and help him write the names in the book.

Groom's Roses at Bier Of Lonely Co-ed Bride

Romance Shattered, Girl Keeps Tryst With Death

Alongside the gray casket in which Henrietta Brien Williams lay today stood a basket of her favorite flowers—roses and tulips. Buried in the bouquet was a card on which was written one word—"Bobby."

This was the offering that Robert Williams sent to the funeral of his bride—the Pitt co-ed with whom he eloped six weeks ago.

Still on her left hand was the simple wedding ring he had squeezed onto the third finger when they were married in Wellsburg, W. Va., April 11.

Henrietta's funeral was scheduled for this afternoon from the home of her parents, 429 Semple street, Oakland. She died yesterday in Pittsburgh Hospital after swallowing poison tablets when she learned that her young husband's wealthy parents had refused to bless their marriage—had, in fact, taken their son, a sophomore at Pitt, from her side to his first home in Bradford, Pa.

The parents, it seems, were opposed to the differences in religion. Henrietta was Jewish.

But the language they spoke was the same. Even after he had been rushed off to Bradford young Williams wrote her of his love—wrote her and asked her that the letters be burned. One, that must have driven away, for the moment, the mental turmoil that beset his bride, consisted of a short sentence:

"DARLING HONEY:
"I love you. Ditto, ditto, ditto! ! ! BOBBY"

EAST END MAN CANDIDATE

John D. Nuskay, 719 East End avenue, today announced his candidacy for a councilmanic nomination in the Republican primaries. Nuskay is an East End garage owner, has been indorsed by the Greater Pittsburgh Garage Association, according to the announcement.

Denying association with any political faction, he said:

"I assure every voter that my vote will be cast as the majority of the voters calling upon me dictate their desires."

THREE INJURED IN COLLISION

Three persons were injured when an automobile in which they were riding collided with a truck in Liberty avenue at the Bloomfield Bridge last night.

Mrs. Catherine Frazier, of 377 Main street, suffered a fractured knee cap and Joseph M. Bowley, of 456 Bailey avenue, driver of the machine, a fractured rib. Mrs. Frazier's daughter, Catherine, 10, suffered slight bruises. They were taken to St. Francis Hospital. The truck was driven by Halus Haines, of Kennett Square, Pa.

Suffering bruises when he rode his scooter against the side of an automobile in Meadow street last night, James Genturko, 10, of 132 Stoebener way, was taken to Pittsburgh Hospital.

FINDS WOMAN IN HOME, SUES

It was quite a surprise to find her husband in her room with another woman, Mrs. Camillia Marie Robinette, of the Library Apartments, testified in her suit for divorce from Ross Alexander Robinette.

But the surprise of surprises was when she asked him if he loved the woman. She said he answered:

"I'm crazy about her."

They were married in 1924 and separated in 1932.

An Election That Is Over Before Voting Starts

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

Commissioner Mulrooney is clipping the number of beer booths from sixty to forty thousand.

Doctors are prescribing thirty quarts of whisky a month. Which will certainly increase the rolling stock on the hobnail liver division.

We don't know what we have now. If it ain't repeal, it is a well saturated substitute and will fool many a nearsighted bartender.

FOUR DORMONT HOMES LOOTED

Burglars robbed four Dormont homes by entering unlocked windows last night, police reported today.

Chief Ralph Miller, of the Dormont police, said apparently the burglaries were committed by the same pair which ransacked other homes on the night of May 1. The prints of bare feet were found about the dwellings previously robbed.

Three of the houses entered last night were in one block of McFarland road. Fifteen dollars in cash was taken from the L. L. Moorman residence at 1628 and $20 from the home of H. D. Jaffee, 1632 McFarland road. Nothing was reported taken from the P. E. Corning home, 1644 McFarland road.

Mrs. J. B. Slapley, 1523 Alabama avenue, reported about $2 was taken from her home.

Tech Student Designs Mummies for Pitt Ball

If art can bring him back to the scenes of his ancient glory, the spirit of old King Tut will hover over the Schenley ballroom Friday night when 700 Pitt students attend the annual senior ball.

On all sides, the newest in decorations will be the oldest of Egyptian art, which will transform the hall into what Pitt students hope will be a pretty fair imitation of an Egyptian palace. Painting on huge mural screens, the decorators have managed to create a large amount of exotic and mysterious Egyptian atmosphere.

There are pictured all the gods in Egyptian mythology, including Isis and Osiris, and hieroglyphics describe the history of the Pharoahs. Guarding the doors are twin mummies nine feet high. And even if the decorations are wrong in minor details, say the committeemen in charge, there aren't any professors of Egyptology at Pitt to prove them wrong.

The designs were made by William A. Trimble, a junior in architecture at Carnegie Tech, at the request of a committee headed by James Van Nostrand. No Pitt men offered any opposition.

There is something else a bit different about the annual ball. It is not supposed to make any money. Among the superfluities which Van Nostrand's committee has omitted for the sake of economy are favors—for the first time in years and years.

Boats Taken as Rum Carriers Forfeited

organization, and asserted that while the Mellons and Grundy did not personally profit from sweatshop operations, backers of these concerns contributed to the Republican campaign chest and were accordingly well treated.

CONTRASTS PARTIES

He said, in part:

"Now that the Legislature has passed into history, two contrasts emerge:

"First, there is the picture of the massed and almost unanimous opposition of Republican senators and assemblymen to every measure introduced in behalf of the great army of Pennsylvania's wage-earners.

"Offsetting this nauseating spectacle is a picture more pleasant to contemplate. It is a picture of seven Allegheny County legislators, elected as Democrats, but performing their duties as conscientious representatives of their entire constituencies.

"The immediate objective with which we are concerned is the November election.

"Five Democratic councilmen and a Democratic mayor installed in the Pittsburgh City Hall next January, and the election of our county, borough and township candidates would permit a beginning in bringing about a new deal in local government of the same high order as is being established in the nation by President Roosevelt.

"As I see it, there is but one—and only one—issue confronting, not only the people of Pittsburgh and Allegheny County, but every inhabitant of the Commonwealth of Pennsylvania as well—and that issue is:

"Shall the domination of almost every phase of the economic, industrial and political life of our people by the Mellon-Grundy partnership be continued or destroyed?

"The Republican party, in all its manifold disguises, in city, county, state and nation, is pledged, not only to its continuation but to the further expansion of its power.

"The core of the special interests structure in Pittsburgh and in Pennsylvania is the Mellon-Grundy alliance. By far, the greatest number of these special interests that operate in this city and in this state are either Mellon-owned or Mellon-controlled. But allied with them, each one strengthening the other, are other great special interests whose mouthpiece is Grundy.

CHARGES POLITICAL RULE

"Until very recently, the Mellon-Grundy partnership, through its control of the Republican party, either directly or indirectly, named almost every public official in Pennsylvania from justice of the peace to justice of the Supreme Court. Mellon-selected federal and county district attorneys practiced before Mellon-appointed or Mellon-elected judges. Mayors, councilmen, chiefs of police, county commissioners, tax assessors, tax collectors, bank examiners, assemblymen, state senators — all wore the livery of Mellon and Grundy, and a great majority of them still wear it today.

"There was a time, not so long ago—thank God it is now past—when not a single Pittsburgh newspaper dared mention the name of Mellon except in idolatrous praise.

"The Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce, now presided over by a former Republican Governor of Pennsylvania, who upon leaving office was made chairman of the board of directors of a Mellon insurance company—instead of adopting and effecting a program of constructive effort that would benefit all Pittsburgh industry and commerce, by its own admission used its best efforts accomplishing the defeat of the old age pensions resolution and the bill limiting the hours of female labor in Pennsylvania factories, and boasted of the fact in its official publication."

Democratic State Chairman Warren Van Dyke, John Phillips, president of the Pennsylvania Federation of Labor; Joseph F. Guffey and Mrs. Emma Guffey Miller, Democratic national committeewoman, also spoke and flayed the Republican leadership.

PINCHOT SIGNS 39 MEASURES, VETOES TWO

HARRISBURG, May 23.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot has until June 5 to act on 547 bills remaining on his desk. Of these, 266 appropriate money to state-aided hospitals, homes and institutions.

Yesterday the chief executive signed 39 bills and vetoed two.

In disapproving the Sones (Lycoming) measure permitting salary boards in counties other than Philadelphia and Allegheny to fix salaries of all appointed employes, Pinchot said it is "vicious in its possibilities."

RELIEF FUNDS

His signature on the Scott (Center) bill gives the state $18,000,000 for relief of the jobless, and brings to $25,000,000 the total appropriated by the state for this purpose since April 1. State officials expect the R. F. C. to lend Pennsylvania another $20,000,000.

Other bills approved:

Shreiner (Dauphin), permitting third class cities to levy a license tax of not more than $100 on each store operated by the same persons, firm or company in the city.

Sterling (Philadelphia), reducing from $30 to $20 a day the pay for traveling judges, effective June 1.

Scott (Centre), eliminating one of the days on which registry assessors must sit at polling places in townships and boroughs.

JURORS' FEES CUT

Scott (Centre), reducing jurors' fees from $4 to $3 a day and limiting their traveling costs to six cents a mile and reducing witnesses' fees from $3 to $2 a day and limiting traveling costs to three cents a mile.

Coyne (Allegheny), providing for pensions for county employes and county poor district employes in all counties except Philadelphia, effective June 1. It sets up as a retirement board, the County Commissioners, County Treasurer, County Controller and two persons elected by the employes.

Rectenwald (Allegheny), providing that the county courts may order installation of an additional voting machine for any election district if the court determines an additional machine is needed.

HARRIS SCORES MARTIN STAND ON PENSIONS

Senator Frank J. Harris today attacked explanations for defeat of old age pension legislation, made by Republican State Chairman Edward Martin yesterday before the Hungry Club.

In one part of his explanation Martin said a Senate committee had not had time to study the proposal. In another he said that singling mothers' assistance to the pension proposition was undesirable.

Harris pointed out that the same link had existed in 1931 when the Senate passed the same resolution it refused to consider this year, and that old age pension legislation had been before the Senators for years. The Senator said that Martin "disclosed his profound lack of knowledge" on legislative issues.

Harris explained that mothers' assistance was included in the pension resolution because, while mothers' assistance funds now are distributed, singling out old age pensions for constitutional action while ignoring aid to mothers might result in court decisions abolishing the latter payments.

Harris said:

"I presented the resolutions necessary for the old age pension amendment in the senate at the opening of the recent session and they were referred to committee on January 9. A few weeks later, following a tie vote in committee, the resolutions were referred to a subcommittee of three senators who had theretofore publicly announced their opposition to the resolutions and to the old age pension movement, who were acknowledged partisans of former Senator Joseph R. Grundy, the conspicuous opponent of the movement in the state.

"These three senators could not possibly have had any intention of giving further study to the resolutions.

"Why was so much time essential for consideration of resolutions of but 17 lines of print? There was little to study in the mechanics of the measure. There was merely the principle of whether the people of Pennsylvania should be allowed to vote on whether its constitution should be amended to permit old age pensions. This desperate eleventh-hour obstacle, cloaked deceitfully as parliamentary tradition, set the movement back.

"The statement of Gen. Martin that the coupling of the resolutions of a provision to preserve mothers' assistance defeated action on the resolutions in the Senate committee makes his defense more astonishing. Why then did the same group violently oppose the resolution prior to 1931, when the mothers' assistance provision was not included, and why was the coupling discovered in 1933 when it was approved in 1931? Moreover, why is this explanation made suddenly now for the first time?"

Cutting of Dogs' Ears for Shows Now Illegal

HARRISBURG, May 23.—(AP.)—From now on you may crop a dog's ears to promote his health but not to win blue ribbons at a show.

The new act prohibits cutting dogs' ears unless a veterinary certifies it is necessary for canine welfare and prohibits exhibition of dogs whose ears are cut.

The act provides maximum penalties of $25 fine or 30 days in jail for owners who are first offenders and $100 fine or 60 days in jail for subsequent offenses.

FROM CHICAGO'S LEADING BREWERY

CHICAGO was preparing for its first World's Fair when the Atlas Brewing Company started business 42 years ago.

Since that day, the history of the Atlas Brewing Company has formed a continuous part of the history of Chicago. By making products of distinctive and outstanding quality, we have grown, from a small beginning in 1891, to be the foremost brewery in America's second city—an institution to which Chicago points with pride as typifying its own sound and remarkable growth.

And so today—as the leader in Chicago of an important industry—we invite you to A Century of Progress, opening May 27. We urge you to attend this unparalleled 25 million dollar exhibition which has been five years in the making. We hope you will find it convenient to enjoy the hospitality which our city extends.

We especially invite you to inspect the Atlas Exhibit and Model Brewery in the Agricultural Building at A Century of Progress.

MY OWN LIFE STORY
By Evelyn Nesbit Thaw

virtuous girl, a Broadway phenomenon."

Now, lest we forget, again let me remind you that Thaw, at pistol point, had exacted a promise from me, that if at any time I saw or ran across Stanford White, I was to tell him.

One day, while we were stopping at the Lorraine, I had a sore throat and went to a specialist to have the tonsils swabbed. Leaving the building as I entered was Stanford White.

That evening before we went out to dinner, I said to Harry:

"According to my promise, I must tell you I passed 'the B' on the street today."

"Did he speak to you?"

"No."

"What did you do?"

"He just looked at me for a moment, and then I ran into the building and that was all."

"You are sure that was all?"

"Yes."

Thaw Calm

Thaw was very calm about it, didn't get the least excited, and said:

"That's right. All I ask is for you to tell me any time you see him. If you don't tell me, I'll find out anyway. There are plenty of people who will tell me."

The significance of that last remark never struck me until later, when I found out that I, too, was being followed by detectives all the time.

And so we come to the night of June 25, 1906:

The true story of it has never been told before.

That evening we had seats for a light musical production called "Mlle. Champagne."

It was an opening—at the theater on the Madison Square Garden Roof, the building often called White's masterpiece. When I discovered that fact, I was amazed to think that Thaw would buy seats for it; that he would even sit there. It seemed incredible.

But, I reflected, we were now married and had lived quiet lives for over a year and he had probably decided to forget all about what had happened in the tower.

I supposed that since we had always attended first nights when in New York, ther was no reason why we shouldn't attend this one; regardless of the fact that it took us to the Madison Square Garden, where we would sit in the very shadow of the tower, the scene of the episode in my life that was to cost White his life.

Thaw had asked two of his friends, Thomas McCaleb and Truxton Beale, to dine with us. Because Martin's was nearest the theater, Thaw decided we would have dinner there.

White Appears

It was a lovely June night. I remember I wore a beautiful white summer dinner dress covered with English eyelet embroidery, made by hand. I had on one of the large picture hats fashionable then.

We had reservations in the main dining room on the Fifth avenue side. I sat facing the main portion of the room and the Fifth avenue balcony. Thaw sat opposite me with his back to all this.

This is important to remember: Beale sat on my right and McCaleb on my left, between us. I could see some of the tables on the balcony.

All of a sudden I saw Stanford White on that balcony. I saw him enter the room and walk through it, and shook for fear McCaleb or Beale might by some chance know him by sight and say something.

After White left the place I didn't care, because I figured all danger was past. Again, you must remember that the worst any of us feared, knowing the enmity between the two men, was a vulgar fist fight and consequent scandal. That had to be avoided at all costs. At the same time, I had given Thaw my word of honor always to tell him every time I saw White—and I had a strong sense of honor—as I think I proved after the unspeakable horror that was at that moment fulminating.

The Famous Note

Also, you must remember, having refused to call Stanford White "beast" or "blackguard" as Harry had demanded, I had compromised on calling him "the B."

Many people have wondered what that mysterious and famous note meant, which I passed across the table to Thaw that night, and why I wrote it. After I was sure Stanford White had left the building, I asked for a piece of paper and pencil, as I wouldn't speak on the subject with McCaleb and Beale at the table. On it I wrote:

"The B was here and went out again."

I had kept my promise to Thaw and figured I had been very tactful in waiting all that time until Stanford White had left the building. I felt sure I had averted a dangerous or at least embarrassing chance meeting.

When Thaw read the note, he nodded, smiled at me, folded it up and put it in his pocket. He continued to talk and dine in apparently bright spirits.

We lingered over dinner, coffee and liqueurs until theater time. Then we walked slowly from Martin's to Madison Square Garden—only a block away. It seemed strange to enter that tower elevator again—this time with Thaw himself.

Once on the Madison Square Garden roof, we were shown to our seats, which were about three-quarters of the way back from the stage.

We sat there for awhile, watching the show, which was terrible. I don't believe I ever sat through anything as bad. I was a little upset, but no one could notice it. Harry excused himself and left us. We thought nothing of that at the time.

PITCHING CAUSE OF PIRATE LET-DOWN

WITH THREE GAMES lost out of the last four played preceding today's meeting with the Dodgers and only five runs scored in the three defeats, it would appear on the face of things that the Pirate batting brace which had been expected to result from the home stay and regular morning practice had failed to develop. But the situation does not necessarily indicate that the Buccaneer attack is feeble. There's a pitching angle to be considered, and it must not be overlooked that the Gibsons have been facing some exceptionally good hurling.

Watson Clark

This was particularly true of yesterday's game in which Watson Clark gave the locals their second shutout of the season, only the third reverse this spring at the hands of a southpaw, whereas they have beaten left-handers eight times and won one other game started by Eppa Rixey but charged to Bob Smith. Clark is one of the best pitchers in the majors when right. He happened to be very much right yesterday and probably would have beaten anybody. Had the score been reversed it would have been pronounced great pitching by French, not weak hitting on the part of Brooklyn. The same rule ought to work both ways. Criticism of the Pirate hitting seems hardly to be in order when you get an eyeful of the National League's club batting averages. The team at the top is Pittsburgh. No offensive is doing a lot to this year's ball, and the Bucs can't be expected to do much more than lead the league.

THE FACT THAT there has been no fighting on the ball field since the principals in the early spring mix-ups were fined and suspended is viewed with dismay by Babe Ruth. "They don't have enough fights in baseball," the Bambino complains. "One a day, or, at least, one a week, would be great. That's what put hockey over.

"You don't think I go to every New York hockey game during the winter just to see them skate and hit the puck, do you? I go to see the rough stuff, and every time I go I see it. So I go right back to see some more. In hockey they give a fellow who fights a five-minute penalty. In baseball they give him a five-day suspension. What are they trying to do—make sissies out of the ball players?"

DIZZY DEAN may be eccentric in some respects, but the Braves have a word of praise for him as a pitcher who does not stoop to alibis. The Hubites have beaten Dean twice this season, and report that on neither occasion did Dizzy offer a plea about an off day or about being outlucked.

When an eleventh-inning bombardment beat him the first time, Dean laughed it off with "Did you ever see so many line drives in your life? I was lucky I wasn't killed." And when the Braves handed him another defeat in the final game of the series the Cardinal flinger took all the blame with never a word of complaint or criticism in connection with infield errors that had put him in a hole.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED for George Sisler as well as for the Browns, the club that has not been a contender since the heydey of that former star. A dozen years ago, Sisler was in his prime, and the Browns were in the thick of the pennant fighting. Today George is a forgotten man in baseball, just getting a little exercise playing on a sandlot team a few miles from Sportsmans Park, where he developed into one of the greatest hitters in the game. At his peak, Sisler pulled down $22,000 a year. Now he plays just to help along his business, which is that of a sporting goods dealer.

Bill McKechnie

DURING THE VISIT of the Braves to Pittsburgh, a couple of veteran fans, not sure of their memories, asked Bill McKechnie to confirm for them a recollection that he had once made two home runs in a game at Forbes Field in his playing days with the Pirates. Bill replied that he had, but wasn't certain whether it was in 1910 or 1911.

The records show that that biggest feat in McKechnie's batting career was performed in the second game of a doubleheader against St. Louis on Saturday, September 2, 1911. It was the game in which Marty O'Toole, then the talk of the baseball world as having been purchased from St. Paul for the unheard of price of $22,500, made his first Pittsburgh appearance and let the Cardinals down with three hits, defeating them 11 to 1. Both of McKechnie's homers went to the old screen in right field, the first off Rube Geyer in the third inning, and the other off Grover Laudermilk in the seventh inning. They were Bill's first homers in the majors.

THE ONLY MAN besides McKechnie who took part in that game and still has any major league connections is Max Carey, Dodger pilot. Max played center field for the Pirates, with Fred Clarke in left and Chief Wilson in right. McKechnie was on first base, Jack Miller on second, Bobby Byrne on third, and Alex McCarthy in Honus Wagner's place at shortstop. Mike Simon did the catching.

Among the then prominent players in the lineup of the Cardinals, who won the first game of the afternoon, 8 to 4, were Miller Huggins, Lee Magee, Ed Konetchy, Rebel Oakes, Mike Mowrey, Steve Evans and Ivy Wingo.

WITH HARNESS-RACING getting started for the season, Walter (Longshot) Cox still stands out as probably the best driver in the game today. He is 65 and has been racing 40 years. During those four decades of competition, Cox has piloted trotters and pacers a staggering distance. It is estimated that the veteran has covered, all told, more than 600,000 miles in a sulky. In other words, Cox has ridden far enough behind his horses to have circled the globe 24 times at the equator. He thinks nothing of driving 100 miles a day in a sulky while working out.

OUT ON THE Pacific Coast they're all astir over the fact that Harvard has consented to send its crew to the big college rowing regatta to be held on the Long Beach course in July.

Appearances of Harvard athletes on the Coast have been rare. The football team went to the Rose Bowl in 1920, and the track men participated in the I. C. 4-A meet at Berkeley last year, but that's about all. Californians think the coming of the Crimson oarsmen assures the success of the regatta. They feel that Harvard will bring something that they couldn't have bought—tradition.

THOUGH THE NAME of Kid McCoy has been carried for many years in the list of former world welterweight fistic champions, old Tommy Ryan now rises to assert that it never belonged there. According to Ryan, from whom McCoy was supposed to have won the championship, the Kid did not hold that title at any time in his career.

Tommy Ryan

The explanation that Ryan gives to back up his assertion is that the crown was not at stake when McCoy knocked him out in the fifteenth round at Maspeth, L. I., on March 2, 1896, inasmuch as McCoy was 16 pounds above the weight limit of the class, which at that time was 142 ringside.

"THAT FIGHT WAS not for the welterweight championship," Ryan declares. "I weighed in fighting condition 142 pounds, then the limit of the class. I permitted McCoy to come in at 158 pounds, which at that time was four pounds above the limit for the middleweight division. In saying this, I do not wish to detract from McCoy's victory. I freely admit that he was the better man that night at Maspeth, but I did not lose my welterweight championship. I was officially recognized as the welterweight titleholder up to 1897, when I gave it up to claim the middleweight championship after Bob Fitzsimmons had relinquished the 154-pound honors to enter the heavyweight class and defeat Jim Corbett. Following my defeat by McCoy, I defended the welterweight title successfully against Tom Tracy and Tom Williams, both of Australia, at 142 pounds ringside. Those matches took place in 1897, more than a year after the McCoy bout in Maspeth, and were promoted and advertised as welterweight championship fights."

TEDDY FORCED TO LIMIT BY VETERAN

By HARRY KECK
Sports Editor.

Ol' Man Ribber Tommy Freeman, of Hot Springs, Cleveland, Erie and Miami, walked over to young Teddy Yarosz' corner after their 10-round battle at Hickey Park last night, stopped, stuck out his hand and said:

"Nice fight, Teddy. Fine work. But, remember, I want a return bout."

If the large turnout of fans who were on deck for the opening of the outdoor season in the Millvale arena had been able to hear that challenge they would have responded fervently:

"And so say we all of us. Amen."

ACID TEST FOR TED

It was a fight. The old acid test for the rip-snorting Yarosz, who defies the world and is a most disappointed young man because the promoters can't bring such bigwigs as Jimmy McLarnin and Young Corbett here to fight him. The old acid test in the fullest sense of what that expression is intended to imply.

The Freeman who had built himself up a following here with his good work last summer and then dissipated it in sorry fashion in a song-and-dance draw with Gorilla Jones at Motor Square Garden last Christmas afternoon was out to make amends, and he did that little thing like all get out. He was in great shape at 154¼ pounds, the same weight, incidentally, that Yarosz made, and, brothers, it was a fight. One of the most earnest punching bees that has been served up here in moons, with Yarosz coming on to win the unanimous decision in the toughest battle in which the local fans ever have seen him engage.

ANYBODY'S FIGHT AT START

For the first half of the journey it was anybody's fight, with Freeman's body blows forcing Teddy to break ground, and once, in the third round, lose his form entirely and take to cover. Then, after the half-way mark, age began to exact its toll, and the eager Yarosz forged ahead to take command of the situation as Freeman broke under the hurricane pace. Rights bounced off the former world welterweight champion's chin until it was a wonder he could stand up under them, but he never quit trying and battering away at the body at every opportunity. Yarosz was seeing to it by then that these moments were rare, for he was shoving Tommy away as soon as possible every time they got close.

A lump was raised under Freeman's left eye in the ninth round and it broke and bled and bothered him considerably, but it could not quench his ambition to keep punching it out with his youthful foe to the final bell.

FREEMAN IN TROUBLE

The first round was even, with Freeman starting with a rush and pounding the body. Yarosz finally got straightened out and moving about and scored sufficiently at long range to balance matters.

In the second, Freeman again went to work on the body and

EXPLANATIONS OF RIPLEY'S CARTOONS OF YESTERDAY: THE FRENCH DEAN OF MEDICINE—The venerable Dr. Tartas, born in 1808, practiced medicine from 1834 to 1909, that is, for three-quarters of a century. He also held a record in continuous municipal service, as Mayor of Rion-des-Landes, France, for a period of 50 years. He was first elected for a seven-year term in November, 1838, and was re-elected seven times, resigning in 1888 to devote himself to his practice. WRIT UPON "WATER"—In the spring of 1767, the French companions of Jonathan Carver, sailing up the Chippewa, suddenly beheld the Eau Claire River. Hitherto they had been compelled to drink the muddy waters of the Chippewa, swollen by rain and tide. Their joyous exclamation "behold the clear water" (eau claire) gave the river and site its present name. It is a curious coincidence that the discoverer of this Clear Water should have been born in Stillwater, N. Y. (1732) and buried at Mount Holywell, in London, the city whose original Celtic name, Llyn-dun, means "Fort on the Water."

SLUGGER FLAYS LEAGUE ON NEW BALL

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Frank O'Doul, one of the most natural batters baseball has produced and a hitter good enough to lead the two major circuits last season, today predicted that the National League leaders of this year would have to be lucky to hit .350.

O'Doul had some pertinent remarks to make concerning his profession and the fact that Frank has the stuff at the plate to outshine stars like the Gehrigs, the Simmonses, the Kleins and the Terrys would indicate that he was not talking through his hat.

The league's leading batter takes the stand that the National League has lost a lot of prestige to the American League wheel in legislating a drastic change in the spheres. He discussed the situation at length with this writer Quoth Frank:

BATTERS HANDICAPPED

"The National League has shown a lack of necessary showmanship qualities in swinging the pendulum back from the 'rabbit ball to a sphere which is even dangerous to the batter. Not content to take out the 'rabbit,' the moguls permit the umpires to blacken up the balls to such an extent that a batter in a clinch doesn't have an even chance to escape serious injury. Pat Malone had the most speed he has ever shown me in the twilight of a second game of a doubleheader. One ball was under my chin so fast I didn't see it because the cover was dark. The powers that be have gone to extremes, they have loosened up the yarn in the balls and the covering is thicker and looser, but you don't see them doing that in the American League."

O'Doul says he does not wish to place circus features over science in the game; he likes to see the scientific batter encouraged, but his philosophy is that the magnates err when they lose sight of the tastes of the public. In this connection he declared:

HACK WILSON'S FEAT

"After years of striving, the National League, through Hack Wilson, finally annexed the home run honors from the American. Hack banged out 56 round-trippers and he established a new record in driving in 190 hits. Now there was the time for the senior league to make a grandstand play, if you wish to call it that. But what happened? Hack's feat hardly had been achived before there was an announcement out to the effect that the National League would toss out the 'rabbit' ball."

O'Doul was smart enough to refrain from home run efforts yesterday as he singled to drive in two Dodger runs after two were out in the fifth to give his club a commanding lead over the Pirates in the first meeting of the two clubs at Forbes Field. The Dodgers won, 3-0.

CLARK BLANKS BUCS

Bill Clark and Larry French staged a southpaw duel with honors being even except in the fifth. With one out in this round, Lopez, Clark and Stripp singled for one run and Frederick sacrificed. O'Doul measured French for a clean hit that put the old ball game on the ice.

Spectacular fielding by Jimmy Jordan, rookie shortstop, kept the Pirates away from the plate. The kid spoiled several basehits. The Pirates grounded into three double plays.

St. Paul Twirler Hurls No-Hit Fray

ST. PAUL, May 23.—Floyd Newkirk, St. Paul hurler, is the newest member of the baseball Hall of Fame.

Newkirk, in splendid form, yesterday hurled a no-run, no-hit game against Kansas City as the Saints won, 5 to 0. It was the third successive shutout victory for St. Paul.

SCHOOL TEAMS BUSY TODAY

By JULIUS LEVIN

The post-season series for the W. P. I. A. L. baseball championship was being played at Dormont High School Field this afternoon with Dormont, champion of Section II, engaging Trinity, champion of Section I. The second game will be played on the Trinity Field in Washington, Pa., on Friday. The series will be settled on a two-out-of-three basis.

The race for the Section III championship has not been settled, but the winner of the Dormont-Trinity series will be pitted against the winner in the third group.

MEET ON TODAY

Nine schools are entered in the Section III championship track and field meet for members of the Central-East End division of the Pittsburgh grade schools at Taylor Allderdice Field this afternoon. They are Colfax, Gladstone, Glenwood, Hazelwood, Osceola, Liberty, Roosevelt, Shakespeare and Wightman. C. W. Nethaway, supervisor of athletics in the grade schools, will be in charge of the meet.

Three baseball games also are being played by the grade school nines. Conroy plays at Troy Hill, Greenfield at Holmes and McCleary at Morningside.

Baseball teams representing the senior and junior groups of the City League also see action this afternoon. In Section I, of the Senior League, Allegheny plays at South and Westinghouse at Peabody. Section II games finds South Hills at Oliver and Allegheny at Langley.

In the Junior division, Prospect plays at Latimer in a Section II fray.

GOLF TEAMS CLASH

Matches in the Interscholastic Golf Conference find Allderdice at Connelly, Kiski at University School, Peabody at Oliver, Wilkinsburg at Springdale, Shady Side at Turtle Creek and Brentwood at McKeesport.

Mt. Lebanon clinched the title in Section II of the Interscholastic Tennis Conference yesterday by defeating Crafton, 6 to 0. In a Section I match, Allderdice nosed out Schenley, 3 to 2.

TRAYNOR LEADS IN VOTING

CHICAGO, May 23.—(AP.)—First returns in the vote of the fans to select a National League team to meet a club of American League stars in Chicago, July 6, show lively battles over the shortstop, pitching and outfield jobs among players in the senior circuit.

Lonnie Warneke, of the Cubs, led the pitchers today with 1,557, while Carl Hubbell, of the Giants, had 1,514. The next man, Red Lucas, of Cincinnati, was just 1,000 points behind Warneke.

Dick Bartell, of the Phillies, led Floyd Vaughan, of Pittsburgh, 411 to 362, for the shortstop job, and Chuck Klein led the outfielders with 1,605. Paul Waner, of the Pirates, was close by with 1,080, and Frank O'Doul, of the Dodgers, had 855.

For the other positions it was not even close. Bill Terry, the New York Giants' manager, led the first basemen with 1,040. Jim Bottomley, of the Reds, the second man, had 620. Frank Frisch, of St. Louis, topped the second basemen with 1,195, to 240 for Bill Herman, of the Cubs. Pie Traynor, the Pirates' third baseman, was high scorer with 1,622. The second man was Woody English, of the Cubs, who had 350.

Gabby Hartnett, of the Cubs, headed the catchers with 1,474, to 135 for Jimmy Wilson, of the Cardinals.

Charles J. Doyle and Harry Keck, of the sports staff, also will take part in the program, along with Leland Becraft and Miss Ruth Johnstone, of WCAE.

Savoldi Defeats Strangler Lewis

NEW YORK, May 23.—(INS.)—Jumping Joe Savoldi, former Notre Dame football star, had squared accounts today with Ed (Strangler) Lewis, four-time wrestling champion who had defeated him at Madison Square Garden last week.

In the same ring last night, Savoldi dropkicked Lewis for a neat goal after 43 minutes and 7 seconds of grappling. Savoldi, from a kneeing position, jumped feet-first at the pudgy veteran and kicked him squarely in the face. Lewis, dazed, was pinned to the mat with a body hold.

NET TOURNEY PLANS SET

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

The heralded revival of the Allegheny County net championships on the courts of the Westinghouse Club will get under way on Thursday, June 29, and end on Tuesday, July 4, according to announcement from Pittsburgh Tennis Association headquarters after a joint meeting of the P. T. A. sanction-schedule and executive committees yesterday.

Present plans for the Westinghouse conclave call for men's singles and doubles only, but it is possible that women's singles and mixed doubles will be added if accommodations for feminine entrants can be provided before the starting day.

Final make-up of the P. T. A. Inter-Club League was likewise decided upon at yesterday's session. Eight teams, P. A. A., Edgewood, Stanton Heights, University Club, Westinghouse, Shannopin, Rockwood and College Avenue, will comprise Section I, while seven aggregations, Westinghouse Seconds, College Avenue Seconds, Washington Heights, Rockwood Seconds, Minnetonka, Belmont and U. S. Bureau of Mines, will cavort in Section II. The championship race gets under way next Saturday. Definite schedule drafts will be released tomorrow.

An informal pre-tournament doubles get-together is to be staged at Stanton Heights on June 11, the Sunday preceding inaugural of the Western Pennsylvania titular affair on the same lot.

West Va. Golf Team Beats Dukes

UNIONTOWN, Pa., May 23.—(AP.)—West Virginia University's golf team yesterday defeated Duquesne, 6 to 0, as Jack Hoblitzel, Mountaineer ace, turned in the low score, 74, three over par, for the Country Club course. The summary:

Hoblitzel defeated Frank Totten, of Duquesne, 6 to 5; Manning, West Virginia, defeated J. Totten, Duquesne 4 to 3. Sam Aspinwall, West Virginia defeated Dailey, Duquesne, 3 to 2. Joe Grow, West Virginia, defeated Walsh, Duquesne, 6 to 5. Hoblitzel and Aspinwall, West Virginia, defeated F. Totten and Dailey; Manning and Grow, West Virginia, defeated J. Totten and Walsh.

REBUILT RED SOX CONTINUE FINE SHOWING

BOSTON ENTRY SET TO LEAVE A. L. CELLAR

Associated Press.

There'll be no American League flag at Fenway Park this year, but the Boston Red Sox, subjected to terrific punishment for many years, definitely are on the upgrade.

The combination of Tom Yawkey's bankroll and Eddie Collins' baseball astuteness, plus the aggressive leadership on the field of Manager Marty McManus, is producing dividends and long-suffering Red Sox fans can expect relief from now on.

Yawkey and Collins have done no reckless spending, but slowly but surely they've built up a really formidable club through the acquisition of Southpaw Lloyd Brown and Catcher Rick Ferrell from the St. Louis Browns, George Pipgras, veteran right hander, and Shortstop Bill Werber from the New York Yankees, and Allen (Dusty) Cooke, fleet outfielder, from Newark.

PIPGRAS VICTOR

Behind Pipgras' seven-hit pitching, the Red Sox whipped the Chicago White Sox yesterday, 3-2, for their third successive victory and drew to within half a game of the seventh-place Detroit Tigers. Pipgras had no worries after Johnny Hodapp, who collected a double and two singles during the day, had driven home the first two Boston runs in the first and third frames. Cooke's homer in the seventh accounted for the other.

The Yankees, Washington Senators and Philadelphia Athletics also won to give the eastern clubs a clean sweep over the West. Vernon Gomez, slim southpaw, outpitched Wes Ferrell as the Yankees outpointed the Cleveland Indians, 3-0.

Washington strengthened its hold on second place, a game behind the Yankees, by beating Detroit, 6-5.

The A's upset the Browns, 6-5, after the St. Louisans thrice came from behind to tie the score. The eminent lefthander, Robert Moses Grove, pitched the last three innings and received credit for the victory.

CARDS BEAT BRAVES

Three shutouts marked the National League program. Pepper Martin's tenth-inning home run with two on broke up a pitching duel between Bill Walker and Hard Luck Ed Brandt and gave the St. Louis Cardinals a 3-0 triumph over the Boston Braves.

The Brooklyn Dodgers turned back the league-leading Pittsburgh Pirates by the same score and moved into fourth place as William Watson Clark outpitched Larry French in another duel of southpaws.

Young Hal Schumacher gave the Cincinnati Reds only three hits, and the New York Giants won easily, 9-0, battering Si Johnson and Allyn Stout for 16 hits, of which Sam Leslie contributed four.

BASEBALL COMEDY

—By NICK ALTROCK—

Nick Altrock

WASHINGTON, May 23.—Unless some enemy has misquoted him, Bucky Harris is debited with the suggestion that an umpire he assigned an hour before each each game to see that the players don't fraterni-e. Well, I will go Buck one better and drop a jucicer hint than that.

Why not assign TWO umpires before each game and have one umpire take the home players out beneath the shade of the centerfield flagpole and entertain them with fairy tales and ghost stories? While this is going on, the other umpire could take the opponents under the grandstand for a basket lunch. Then, just before game time, the umps could ring a schoolbell and let the boys warm up with bean bags till it was time to start playing ball.

The umpires wouldn't mind giving up their extra time to keep the players separated, as I am sure some of the kinder hearted players would bring nice, red, rosy apples to the umps from time to time. Gee, ain't baseball getting to be a tough game!

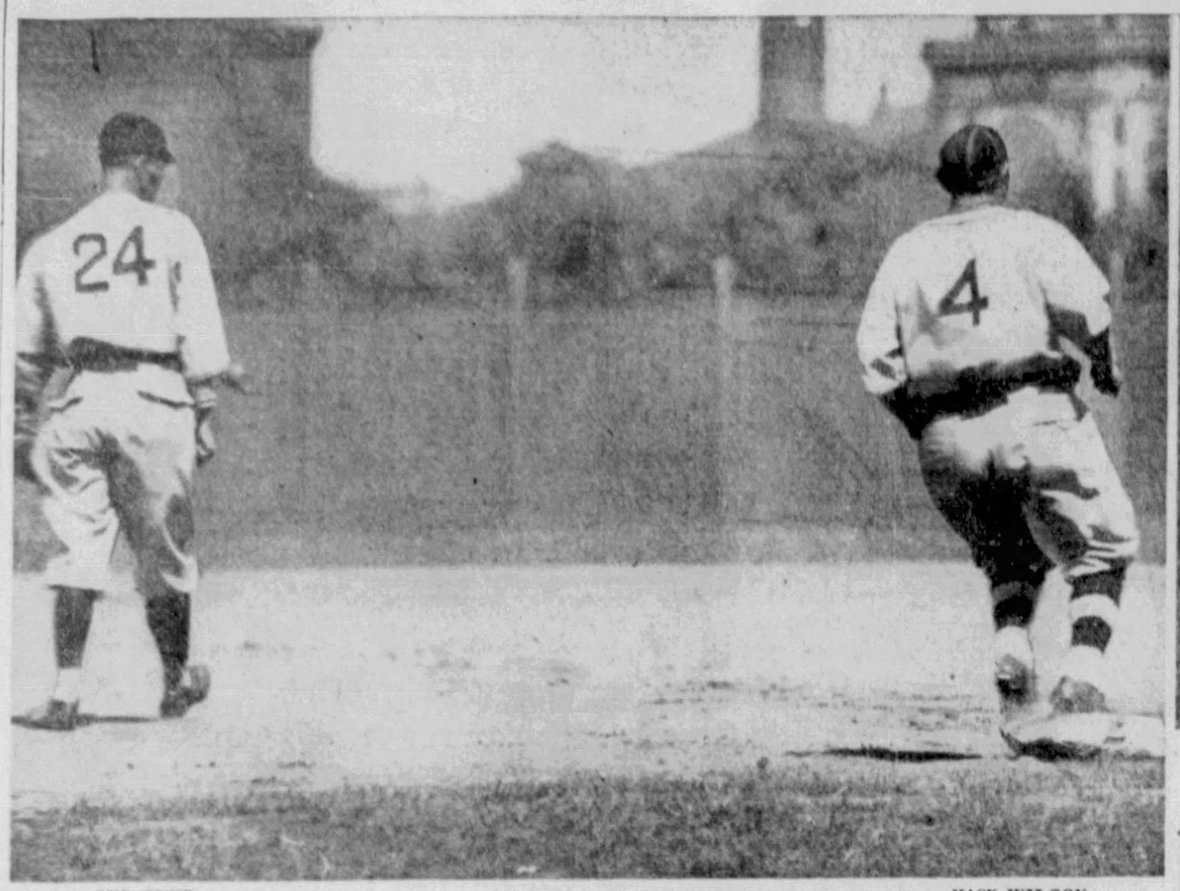
Back View of Good ol' Hack, Who's Back—What's This, Picking Dandelions?



GUS SUHR

HACK WILSON

LARRY FRENCH

GUS SUHR

Lest you jump at conclusions, Pitcher Larry French and First Baseman Suhr, of the Pirates, are not inspecting the turf or picking flowers in this picture. They're merely fielding Third Baseman Joe Stripp's sacrifice bunt in the seventh inning. French got the ball and threw to Second Baseman Piet, who covered first for the putout. It's all very cute isn't it?

FRANK SHIELDS, PARTNER LOSE

AUTEUIL, France, May 23.—(AP.)—Frank Shields, former United States Davis Cup player, and his German partner, Cilli Aussem, today were defeated in the second round of mixed doubles in the French hard-court tennis championships by Suzanne Barbier and Christian Boussus, of France, 3-6, 11-9, 7-5.

Mrs. Dorothy Burke was the second American victim of the day, losing in women's doubles with Muriel Thomas, the English girl, to the strong German combination of Fraulein Aussem and Hilda Krahwinkel, 8-6, 6-2.

Miss Helen Jacobs won her first match in women's doubles with her French partner, Ida Adamoff, the pair defeating Mme. Wolerom and Mme. Chanove, of France, 6-0, 6-3, in a first-round encounter.

SPORT VIGNETTES

Joe Orsini, of Clairton, the Pitt boxing coach, who made his debut as professional referee at Hickey Park, Millvale, last night, boasts a rather unusual record . . . It is not generally known, but he owns a victory over Tony Canzoneri, the lightweight champion, who has held three world titles . . . They met when they were boxing as amateurs in New York in 1926 . . . Orsini admits there was a great to-do over the decision, but it is in the records nevertheless.

Orsini was born in Uniontown, but moved with his folks to Clairton when he was 12 years old . . . At 14 he joined a boxing club, when he weighed only 103 pounds . . . His first amateur bout was with Lawrence Lyons, of the Willow Club, then the national amateur flyweight champion, in the South Side Market House . . . He was in the eighth grade of grammar school at the time.

Entering high school, Orsini was speedily withdrawn when his mother learned he was playing football . . . He went to work in a steel mill, but three years later decided to return to school to complete his education . . . This time no objection was entered against his participation in athletics, and he went in for football, basketball, track and boxing . . . He played on three undefeated teams in high school and was named all-W. P. I. A. L. end in 1927 and 1928 . . . He won his track letter as a sophomore and won his first real medal in a state track meet at Shady Side Academy.

Besides his athletic activities, he was exchange editor and circulation and business manager of his school paper, the Clairtonian, and also business manager of the school annual . . . While a junior in high school, he won the Allegheny Mountain Association A. A. U. featherweight boxing title and competed in the Olympic trials at Boston in 1928, but had to withdraw in the semi-finals, due to a cut eye . . . He won an International tournament in Buffalo in 1929 and altogether competed in 130 bouts as an amateur, of which he lost only 14 . . . In addition to Canzoneri, he boxed such notables as Cuddy DeMarco, Tiger Joe Randall, Ted Yarosz, Harry Forbes and Harry Devine, the Olympic champion . . . He fought nine times as professional, winning all of the bouts . . . In his last such bout, and his only one in Pittsburgh, he won on a foul over Frankie Portland at the Moose Temple.

In the fall of 1929, Orsini entered Slippery Rock Teachers' College, and, although weighing only 139 pounds, made the football team . . . He played against Duquesne University at Forbes Field . . . Was circulation manager of the Rocket, the college paper, and a member of the Press Club at Slippery Rock . . . Left Slippery Rock to enter Pitt and coach the varsity boxing squad and teach physical education on the side, and has been there for three seasons, during which his teams have competed against the squads of Army, Navy, West Virginia, Temple, Duquesne, W. & J., Carnegie Tech, Syracuse and Penn State . . . His most successful pupil was Jack Shricker, who won the Intercollegiate Boxing Conference middleweight title two years.

During the time he has been at Pitt, Orsini has refereed many amateur bouts, gaining the experience which should stand him in good stead now . . . As a physical instructor he teaches fencing, handball, swimming and gymnastics in addition to boxing . . . He is interested also in marble shooting and coached Joe Medvidovich, of Clairton, to the National title in 1927 . . . Far above the average boxing man in intelligence and education, Orsini should prove a valuable addition to the ranks of local referees . . . His appointment to the post is a happy one for the good of the sport.—HARRY KECK.

CHARLESTON, W. Va.—(AP.)—The first application for authority to conduct horse races under West Virginia's new racing law has been filed. It was submitted to J. B. McLaughlin, commissioner of agriculture, by the Charlestown Horse Show Association of Jefferson County.

BROWNSVILLE, Pa.—(AP.)—Swerving out of control on a hill, a truck, carrying a Republic (Pa.) baseball team, turned over, injuring 12 players. Mike Bashar, Jr., 21, and William Callahan, 20, suffered fractured limbs and were moved to a Brownsville Hospital. The others received cuts and bruises.

NEW YORK—(AP.)—Paul Berlenbach, former world light-heavyweight boxing champion, returned to the sports scene as a wrestler last night and threw Frank Marone, of Kansas City, in 25 minute 50 seconds of their bout at the Brooklyn Sports Stadium, Coney Island. Berlenbach ended his rival with a body slam. Each weighed 185 pounds.

BROWNSTOWN, Ind.—(AP.)—William C. Pearce, 48, former professional baseball player, is dead at his home here after a heart attack. Known as "Bunny" Pearce, he began his professional career in the Three-Eye League in 1908. The following year he went to Cincinnati of the National League and was there for two years. He later played with Indianapolis, Louisville and Columbus in the American Association, Montreal in the International League, and San Francisco in the Pacific Coast League.

WOMEN'S TEAMS SHOW CLASS

By TOM BIRKS

If the results of the inaugural matches in the Western Pennsylvania Women's Team League may be taken as a basis of reckoning, the champion Allegheny Country Club array is up against a tough brand of competition as it goes about defending the championship won a year ago.

It is true that Allegheny, led by Mrs. Bernd Rose, started out in an auspicious manner by defeating Butler in the opening match, 6 to 3, but in the other matches Oakmont and the Field Club showed well-balanced teams that will be hard to beat.

OAKMONT WINS

Oakmont, with Anjeanette Hunter missing, took all the nine points from the Westmoreland Country Club, the Section II champion being forced to play in keener competition with its No. 1 player, Mrs. Louis Friedman, out of the lineup.

The absence of Miss Hunter brought Mrs. M. K. Garber into the Oakmont team lineup for the first time. Last year Mrs. Garber played with Stanton Heights. Mrs. Theo Zinsmeister, another former Stanton Heights player, was playing under new colors yesterday. Mrs. Zinsmeister has joined the Butler Country Club.

The Field Club team, playing over its home course, swamped Stanton Heights, 9-0.

Just as has been forecast, Youghiogheny demonstrated that it will be a big hurdle for any club to get over in the Section II race. Mrs. Tom Bennett and her mates started out by taking all nine points in the first match against the Country Club of Pittsburgh at St. Clair; Shannopin defeated its rivals from Highland, 6 to 2, while Mrs. J. H. Bialas piloted the Longue Vue women's team to a 7-1 victory over South Hills, another newcomer in Section II.

ERATH, FREEMAN VICTORS

Paul Erath, of the Edgewood Country Club, teaming up with O. Freeman, of the home club, won the first pro-amateur tournament of the season at the Hannastown Golf Club yesterday afternoon. Erath and Freeman shot a 34-32—66, to lead the field by two strokes.

The president of the Western Pennsylvania Golf Association, Robert Smith, paired with Wes Walthour, home pro, tied for second honors with J. Jamison and Perry Del Vecchio, each pair having a 68.

The summary:

C. McAllister and Charley Manning, Shannopin, 71; H. Schingler and Andy Veltman, Nemacolin, 70; R. Jamison and Walter Loeffler, North Park, 71; J. M. Horn and George Underwood, North Park, 72; J. K. Davis and Guido Paroline, St. Clair, 74; J. Lauff and Nelson Zimmerman, Wildwood, 71; C. McCadley and Fred Brand, Allegheny, 72; F. Rose and Bert Meyers, South Hills, 73; W. Backun and Pete O'Hara, Westmoreland, 75; J. McKeever and John Manley, Montour Heights, 75; C. Bullion and Ted Luther, Valley Heights, 75; J. Taylor and Emil Loeffler, Oakmont, 75; J. Bailey and Walter Johnstone, Butler, 76; C. Anderson and Fiore Bruno, Hillcrest, 76; J. Jamison and Willie McKay, Longue Vue, 77; W. S. Lane and Jimmy Devlin, Nemacolin, 77; C. McKee and Jimmy O'Donnell, Churchill Valley, 78; H. Johnston and Jock Kennedy, Fox Chapel, 78; T. Jamison and Dave Clarke, Castle Shannon, 78; J. F. Horn and Dale Zimmerman, Chartiers Heights, 83.

Local golf fans are looking forward to the appearance of Gene Sarazen, United States and British Open golf champion, in his exhibition match, along with Joe Kirkwood, his partner, against Vincent Eldred and Pete O'Hara, local pros, at the Field Club tomorrow.

Tut in Hospital After Coast Kayo

SAN FRANCISCO, May 23.—(AP.)—King Tut, of Minneapolis, was knocked out in the fourth round of a scheduled 10-round fight here last night by Babe Marino, San Francisco welterweight, and was taken immediately to an emergency hospital, where physicians said he suffered possible internal injuries.

EAGLES BOOKING

The Carrick Eagles' baseball team is eager to book a doubleheader with any first-class nine in the district for Decoration Day, at home or abroad. For this attraction, teams can call Carrick 9764 and ask for Lou, or Mr. Friend.

YAROSZ WINS HARD FIGHT

hurt Teddy. He kept crowding and began to slug with reckless abandon and Yarosz had his mouthpiece knocked out. Then followed one of the most dramatic incidents of the fight. Just when Freeman was a mile out in front and appeared to be on his way to victory, Yarosz nailed him flush with a right to the jaw that staggered him and he retreated to a neutral corner, with Yarosz following and punching away with both fists. Here Freeman's ring generalship alone saved him from a knockout or at least a knockdown. Covering and bobbing under Yarosz' swings, he weathered the storm and was fighting back at the bell.

Undaunted, Tommy again went to work on Teddy in the third, and this time he kept up a sustained attack throughout, forcing Yarosz to protect himself as he banged away in the clinches. He finally had Ted missing and far off his stride to carry the round by a wide margin.

TED'S HARDEST FIGHT

The tide turned again in the fourth, with Yarosz moving rapidly and scoring on the outside. He got the range with his rights to the head and Freeman landed only one telling blow in the round, a right to the jaw as Yarosz was coming off the ropes.

From then on Yarosz was the winner all of the way, but not without plenty of opposition from his foe. Freeman first began to show signs of wear in the sixth, when Yarosz knocked a patch off his left eye and also knocked out his mouthpiece.

Freeman was in serious trouble for the second time in the eighth round, when the punches were coming so fast he had to retreat to the ropes again and call upon the tricks of experience to pull himself out of a bad spot.

The lump on Tommy's eye came in the ninth, but he was fighting it out in the tenth.

Summed up, Tommy won only one round, the third, but he had the second sewed up until he got into difficulty late, and he held his own in the first, and at no time did Yarosz have a cinch. He had to work hard from bell to bell in every round and probably found it no easy matter to keep from becoming discouraged in the face of the determined fight of the former champion. After it was over, he admitted this was one of the hardest battles of his career, if not the hardest, and no fan was more profuse in his praise of the amazing Freeman than Yarosz himself.

PRELIMINARIES POOR

It was well that the windup was a humdinger for the preliminaries were bad, very bad. Johnny Chiodo and Rosy Grier put on a yawn in the eight-round semifinal, with Chiodo winning; Heebie Thomas lost to Harry Weekly by a technical knockout in the fourth round, when the referee stopped the one-sided match, and Jackie Mates won over Pete Fleming in the opener, a crude mauling affair. Grier, Weekly and Mates are Ohio boxers, Fleming hails from Hot Springs, Chiodo from Johnstown and Thomas from the East End.

Joe Orsini, Pitt boxing coach, made his debut as a professional referee in the first two bouts and got off to a good start. Red Robinson handled the others and Ray Eberle was on the job as the club's new announcer. Tony Herrera and Lew Massey were announced as the main bout principals for next Monday night.

Between Rounds

That's quite a card Lew Raymond has tossed together for his Arena Thursday night, with Pete DeGrasse boxing Petey Sarron and Mosc Butch meeting Antol Koesis in the two 10-rounders and Johnny Durso boxing Young Kid McCoy, of Toledo; Fritzie Zivic opposing Jack McFarland, of Canton, O., and Johnny Hinds, of New York, taking on Dandy Allen in the six-rounders. Hinds has boxed two six bouts and won both of them in the same ring, yet here he bobs up in the opening bout.

We'll be seeing another Lew Raymond here soon—Lew Raymond, the boxer, of Baltimore, nephew of Vince Dundee. Raymond has boxed a draw with Tony Falco and beaten Ralph Lenny and knocked out Johnny Hayes a few nights ago.

GRAPHIC GOLF

WALTER TRAVIS' PUTTING GRIP

In no golf shot save putting do so many different forms and grips appear. Leo Diegel's unusual putting stance is known to all. Johnny Farrell presses the tip of his right thumb on the shaft to aid touch sensitivity.

There are other various methods and many still use the style made famous by Walter J. Travis. Travis had both thumbs down the shaft in putting with the index finger of the right hand extended near the back of the shaft, the tip of this finger touching it. This not only aided a more sensitive putting touch, but enabled a careful gauging of distance. It also is an aid in keeping the putter head at right angles to the intended line in both the back and downswing.

23 Cars Qualify For 500-Mile Rac

INDIANAPOLIS, May 23.—(INS.)—Twenty-three cars have passed the speed qualifications today for the 500-mile automobile classic on the Speedway next Tuesday. The field is limited to 42 starters.

Al Aspen and Mitz Davis, of Philadelphia, were cut and bruised when their car struck the retaining wall while going 109½ miles per hour. They were taken to a hospital for treatment and later released.

Mark Billman, of Indianapolis, qualified for the classic when he pushed his car around the oval for an average speed of 112.41[illegible] miles per hour. Trials will be held until Sunday.

ACROBAT

You have seen acrobats swing from dizzy heights; grasp hands and somersault; leap from bar to bar. Suppose they missed! No—perfectly timed, they cheat death by a hairs-breadth! • So with the telephone. At your word it finds one person among a million. Fire breaks out—it snatches you to safety. Sickness strikes—it summons aid instantly. • Whatever the emergency it will not falter. If for no other reason than for protection you NEED a telephone in your home.

A telephone contributes so much to your security, happiness and efficiency. Yet its cost is small—less than 10 cents a day. It is hardly a question of "Can I afford it?" Rather, the question is: "Can I afford to be without a telephone in my home?"

STOCK MARKET RISE ROUTS BEARS

NEW YORK, May 23.—(AP.)—The stock market swung upward again today, as bears became discouraged over the failure of an important reaction to develop out of the sagging tendencies of recent sessions.

Recent speculative favorites among the "wet" stocks were whirled upward, and many industrials and rails promptly followed, with several advances ranging from 1 to 4 points or more. Strength of wheat, up about 2 cents a bushel, and a good rally in cotton, helped the movement in shares.

While corporate and business news was meager, it remained of a hopeful character, and bullishness once more dominated the share market. Shorts who had sold in the quiet recession since the middle of last week had obviously become nervous over the failure of an important reaction to develop, and rushed to cover.

The rise in wheat and cotton added impetus to the movement in shares. Wheat had reacted somewhat more sharply than shares in recent sessions, but recovered rather smartly, evidently reflecting the renewed prospect of a fairly early application of processing taxes under the Farm Relief Act.

Unconfirmed rumors that the Federal Reserve System had, or would quickly, start its open market credit expansion program, together with a sag in the dollar as against gold currencies, lent an inflationary aspect to the market once more. News that Dr. O. M. W. Sprague had been asked to become financial and economic adviser to the United States led to considerable speculation as to possible steps toward stabilization of the dollar. Dr. Sprague, formerly of Harvard, has been serving as advisor to the Bank of England.

Wall street was intensely interested in the start of the Senate investigation of private banking, with J. P. Morgan taking the stand, but uneasiness lest it have an unsettling effect upon the market, as had been suggested in some brokerage leggers, proved wholly unjustified.

Sugar Market.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Raw sugar was quiet again early today.

Futures opened 1 point higher to 1 point lower, with the present crop deliveries relatively steady on scattered covering and commission house buying, while new crops were a point lower under liquidation. Volume was again small. The market showed no further change to midday, with September contracts at 1.42c and December at 1.48c.

In refined there was a better withdrawal demand and new business in second hands was more active. Prices were unchanged.

FARM STATUS IMPROVED BY F.R. PROGRAM

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, May 23.—Apart from ballyhoo, how has the status of the American farmer been affected by the spring upturn in wheat and other agricultural staple prices.

Mr. Rukeyser

Do the ledgers of agricultural implement companies and merchandise companies reveal any tangible change in the buying attitude and debt paying ability of farmers since the recent upturn?

These questions strike me as of paramount importance since prior to the recent rally the absence of farmer buying power was a principal cause of the breakdown of normal trade. A revival of effective demand for industrial products by farmers would constitute a landmark in the road to lasting business recovery.

SENTIMENT BETTER

One of the two or three ablest businessmen in the country, who depends on the patronage of farmers, in answering these questions, told me:

"Unquestionably the upturn in some farm commodity prices has improved the frame of mind of our farmers generally, because the farmer, like the columnissts and theorists, who write and talk about agriculture, is inclined to take wheat as the symbol or measuring stick, even though it represents only about 7 or 8 per cent of the agricultural output. On the whole, I would say that the farmer is more hopeful that he has been for a good while.

"However, I do not believe the improvement in farm commodity prices has gone far enough or lasted long enough yet to bring about any significant change in the farmer's buying attitude or debt-paying ability. Livestock prices, for example, must show a considerable and sustained advance before the farmer can hope to get back his production costs. Further, increased receipts from considerably improved crop prices and slightly improved livestock prices will probably be used in the first instance to pay off urgent and unescapable obligations, such as taxes, interest, etc.

"Frankly, I would not care to prophesy that we are near a revival of farm demand and ability to pay for industry's products, although I do believe that such a change must come in the reasonably near future and certanly hope that it will come soon."

ACTION URGED

Queried concerning the practical value of the farm relief legislation, the executive rejoined:

"The scope of legislation is so great, and so much of the power it confers is discretionary that I doubt if any human being can foretell at this time what the effect will be. Without attempting to go into detail, I will say that there are some features of the legislation which seem to me sound and workable and others that are at least questionable."

'MOP' TRANSFER UNDER FIRE

ST. LOUIS, May 23.—(AP.)—A motion by the Reconstruction Finance Corporation for a court order for an investigation of property purchase and sales by the Missouri Pacific Railroad has been met by an official statement that properties in question were contracted for "after thorough investigation."

In filing a petition in Federal Court here late yesterday the Federal Loan Agency asserted creditors are entitled to particulars of the purchase for $20,334,262 of terminal property in Kansas City and of the St. Joseph (Mo.) Belt Railway. The R. F. C. asserted its interest developed through non-payment of a loan of $23,134,800.

As outlined in the petition, the properties were first purchased by the Alleghany corporation, reputedly controlled by O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen, Cleveland railway magnates who also control the Missouri Pacific. After the purchase the St. Joseph and Kansas City hoidings were declared to have been turned over to Terminal Shares, Inc., owned wholly by the Alleghany Corporation, and in turn sold to the Missouri Pacific.

The motion sets out that both buyer and seller were controlled by the Alleghany, through the Van Sweringens. Amounts set forth in contracts "are greatly in excess of the reasonable market value of the property at that time," the petition recited.

Daily Crude Output Off 55,053 Barrels

TULSA, May 25.—Daily average production of crude oil in the United States during the week ended May 20 amounted to 2,929,131 barrels, a decrease of 55,053 barrels daily from the preceding week, according to the Oil and Gas Journal.

Crop Production Loans Take Drop

MINNEAPOLIS, May 23.—(AP.)—The Federal Crop Production Loan office here has disbursed only $6,376,505 to farmers in 11 states this year, compared with $23,000,000 in eight states in 1932, Manager L. J. Paulson said today.

Better crops in many areas last year than in 1931 were given as a leading reason for the sharp decrease by Paulson, who said the loans were made to 54,378 farmers this year compared with 113,000 a year ago. Individual loans were smaller this year in most instances.

U. S. Steel Realigns Gary Subsidiaries

NEW YORK, May 23.—(AP.)—The United States Steel Corporation realigned some of its subsidiaries at Gary, Ind., in accordance with its recent policy of reducing their number.

The Indiana Steel Company's plant, operated by the Illinois Steel Company, has been formally merged with the latter. The Gary Tube Company's properties have been transferred to the National Tube Company.

Butler, Pa., May 18, 1933

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph,
Pittsburgh, Pa.

Gentlemen:

Several weeks ago, I advertised a 30-acre farm, 5-room house, barn, other buildings, for $800, in the Sunday Sun-Telegraph. This ad sold the 30-acre farm for me.

James Ross of Melcroft P. O., Fayette Co., Pa., read the ad in the Sun-Telegraph and bought the farm. He is now living there. I had used the same ad in the other papers and received no replies from them, but the Sun-Telegraph is the paper that produced me a buyer.

You may use this letter if you wish.

Yours very truly,

AUDACIOUS GIRL REVEALS SECRETS OF SOUTHERN SEAS

CHAPTER VII.

I don't make friends easily—not intimate friends. Not that I don't want to, or don't like people—but it is difficult. But I made some lasting friendships out there—three or four.

Dian was my very good, my well-loved friend. I trust she will always be; Dian within whose beautiful head reposed more knowledge and intelligence than could be grasped by all the rest of the feminine population of the islands put together. Until now Dian's life has been all either zenith or nadir. After she had married her young Australian lieutenant, and when they had set out for his home in Australia, they had embarked on a career that sounds like fiction. For Gerry, the husband, developed bad lungs from war gas. They had little money, and what they had was devoted to Gerry's relief. But they had love and high courage.

Gerry knew somewhat of seafaring. Dian, among other things, was a qualified engineer. So they bought them a schooner and together set out from Sydney for New Guinea in search of fortune and Gerry's health.

Dian's and Gerry's social position in Rabaul was not so very high—not with the "four hundred." Namanula Hill did not open its doors to them, nor did the upper commercial stratum. One cannot live half on a schooner in shorts and a jersey and half at a hotel in Chinatown, and hobnob with Rabaul's social register. Dian, at the time, didn't even notice that this was so. It was only long after, when married to a leading citizen of the Melanesian capital, that the doors opened wide, though she herself was still no more nor less than the young erstwhile engineer of the Sally Ann.

HUSBAND DIES

They saved enough money to buy a copra plantation in the Solomons and did fairly well. Then Dian got black-water fever—that terrible scourge of New Guinea from which a victim so rarely recovers. But her superb health brought her through. Gerry was beside himself at the thought of losing her, and when she recovered they left the Solomons for a furlough in Australia. But in Sydney the fetal germ that had been incubating in his blood matured, and Gerry died a victim of black-water fever.

Dian is not one to quarrel with fate. She spent nearly all her money for white flowers for his grave; and something vital and young and passionate within herself kept his freed soul company. Gathering up the frayed strings of her life, she plunged into physical work, at first laboring like a farm-hand side by side with ranchers on an Australian station. She cooked, housekept, washed, tended sheep. But the call of New Guinea was upon her. Returning to Rabaul, she took a job there. She couldn't bear to go back to the Solomons plantation alone.

MARRIED AGAIN

All men are in love with beautiful, brainy Dian—they can't help it. She married one of them; women like Dian are not meant to live alone, and, besides, there were too many memories to haunt her solitude. He is a good man, who adores her. Formerly a schoolmaster in Tasmania, he now conducts a thriving business in Rabaul. He married her knowing that she would play fair with him, but that the great tenderness she had for the lovable, impetuous Gerry had gone west with him. I know that he can't forget the sealed corner in her heart into which no one else may enter. Dian still lives a secluded life, for the tiresome, libelous, unsatisfying social life of the tropics has as little interest for her now as it would have had when she helped sail the Sally Ann before the trades. Never until now has she experienced comparative affluence and security. I am not sure that either benison rests easily on her soul. Her eyes are sometimes wells of wistfulness.

One day Dian and I came across some photographs, one of which was of herself and the lad that died. He was tall and thin, not at all handsome, but with a smile that betrayed why he was so dear. And Dian was there, as lovely as a flower, with an expression that she has lost since. It was taken in the Solomons. Studying it for a moment, Dian said: "I look as if I had just been kissed on the back of my neck, don't I." And doubtless she had.

The Germans at Ah Chee's were also my friends. It was not strange that they should not have trusted me at first. I was the only woman in the hotel, and I had come out of nowhere and for no apparent purpose. Women don't go to Rabaul just out of curiosity. No wandering woman such as I had ever before passed through there.

AN OBESE GERMAN

Theirs was a charmed circle on Ah Chee's gallery in the evening. The little Chinaman had screened off a corner of his gallery for his own private use, but these Teutons, who had been his friends of many years, were welcome to the freedom of his hotel.

Among them was Marx. His soft brown eyes, which sometimes fill easily with tears, look as guileless as a child's. He is considered "dangerous" by the government. There have been innumerable motions made to deport him, but he never fails to sidestep deportation. And now he is pretty safe, for he could never live outside of the tropics. There is no doubt that Marx pulls powerful strings in both Canberra and Germany.

He is an awful example of what the tropics will do to you if you don't watch out! Twenty odd years ago when he arrived in New Britain he was a lean, well-proportioned, good-to-look-at young German. He grew round and round, all the while deploring his vanishing symmetery of form over huge steins of beer, his mild brown eyes becoming mournful over his plight. But his brain was always as keen as a steel trap. His plantations and trading stations prospered. He became a figure in the colony, physically and figuratively. Now he weighs well over three hundred pounds, and he is only of middle height. He cannot see his feet when he stands up. It takes two native boys to dress him, for, try he ever so valiantly, he could never don his trousers or put on his shoes himself.

REAL FEASTS

The war has made a considerable dent in his fortunes. His ostensible business is a tradestore in Chinatown, importing goods from Switzerland and Germany. His is the most untidy, most enchanting tradestore I have ever explored. It is housed in a dilapidated rough wooden building. Aside from the cheap trumpery to appeal to kanakas, his chief imports are choice wines and tinned delicacies. These last he imports in such large quantities that he cannot hope to sell half of them. What he does not sell he consumes himself. This, confidentially, is their reason for being there.

Marx used sometimes to invite me over to luncheon or dinner. I always went. Huge bales and wooden boxes filled with wines and tinned foodstuffs made walls around his rear courtyard, which otherwise was hemmed in by Chinese traders' shacks. Food would be brought, even in the pouring rain, from the house-cook (meaning cook-house of course) across this courtyard by a wild-haired Admiralty Islands native in a bright green laplap—delicate soup (frequently green turtle), pate de foie gras, truffles, gelatine of chicken, a tinned concoction of pork chops and some ineffable kind of sauce, and German sausage, to be sliced off as desired. And caviar, too, if I felt inclined. And an inexpressible kind of tinned plums of which I was most fond. And wines . . . still or sparkling Hoch, Burgundy, Rhine wine. Ah, dinner with Marx was a red-letter event!

AH CHEE DESERTED

But I must not forget Ah Chee. Sitting in the shadows just outside the lamp's radiance, with his friends gathered around him in his screened-off sanctum, he looked like some little wrinkled god. There's no telling how old he is—he might be 40 or 60, for all I could tell. His eyes are kind and very sad, with the appealing, puzzled look that we see in a monkey's eyes. He has a small son whom he worships, a slant-eyed lad who is growing tall and clean-limbed, and whose eyes are not in the last sad.

A dozen years ago Ah Chee sent to China for a bride, the money going with the order. She came one day, a lovely little thing and very young. He idolized her just as he does his son now. Every boat from China brought embroidered clothes for her delight. Most of these clothes are there today in chests in Ah Chee's room. She bore him a son within the first year of their marriage.

About two years after the birth of her son she bore another child and the baby died. Then one day she eloped with one of the men whom Ah Chee had befriended. Later, the little Chinaman, learning that she had been abandoned in Java, sent word to her to come back. But she would have nothing more to do with him. Now he sometimes gets money to her without her knowing its source. Perhaps she thinks is comes from the renegade. All her beautiful things wait for her to come back. But she will not come. Ah Chee sits in the shadow, silently, for he will never intrude on the white masters' conversation or pleasure, though he enjoys the friendly group around his table.

SECTIONAL VIEW OF A SUBMARINE FIRING A TORPEDO

Through mechanical development, increased size and operating radius, the submarine became the most formidable naval weapon for defense and attack. Powerful Diesel engines propel it and while on the surface also drive d. c. generators which charge storage batteries to supply current for operating the ship when submerged. Submersion is effected by the use of diving rudders and ballast tanks. Observation is made through towering telescopes. The main weapon of the submarine is its torpedoes each of which is capable of destroying a ship. On deck it has guns and may also carry an airplane for scouting. ELECTROLYTIC OXIDATION AND REDUCTION

By oxidation the valence becomes more positive or less negative; by reduction less positive or more negative. Both are transfers of electrons readily accomplished by electric current. The generator pumps electrons from the—to the + terminal through outside circuit; the material around the cathode must accept electrons (reduction), around the anode must yield electrons (oxidation). Thus when current passes through a base or acid solution, hydrogen ions accept electrons at the cathode and become hydrogen gas. 4H (ions) + 4 electr. = 2H2. At the anode an equal number of hydroxyl-ions lose electrons and appear as oxygen gas. 4OH (ions) = O2+2H2O+4 electrons. (Deming: General Chemistry).

The Bug's Sure Racing Tips

Last week we furnished you with a list of race hosses you shouldn't bet on. Our bright-eyes readers have asked us for another series of well-named nags.

We oblige with real Oriental courtesy. We cannot explain the mystery of the hoss named Banana's Ghost.

We know that bananas do not have ghosts. If they did it would be fearful and terrific. Bananas come in bunches when alive. We would not like to look upon the morbid panorama of ghosts of the tropical fruit marching 18 abreast down the dim corridors of the old baronial mansion. Here's the list:

First race—Ice Water, No Funds, Hitch Hiker, Boss' Money, Thick Spectacles, Out of Print, Service Discontinued, Instalment Due.

Second race—Frog Foot, Rich Mixture, Never Hurry, File Closer, Municipal Garbage, Monkey Vines, Leaning Chimney.

Third race—Broken Dikes, Short Circuit, Road Closed, Burned Toast, Bad Molar, Wrestler's Ear, Short Weight, Back Taxes.

Fifth race—Cold Lunch, Home to Mother, Hayride, In the Bag, Cannibal's Guest, Opened by Mistake, Help Wanted, No Fishing, Canoe Necking, One-Armed Driver, College Love.

There's a list that should race you over the hills and have you in the poorhouse by twilight. We ain't charging you the usual 25 cents for our inside dope.

Any one of those hosses is better than money in the bank. It's sure pennies in the tincup. We got all the dope from our famous Australian jockey, who rode his race perched in a kangaroo's pouch.

Now for the Subway!

Conditions Are Ripe For Proceeding With Pittsburgh's Long Delayed Transportation Improvement

The City Transit Commission presented to the Mayor and City Council yesterday a clear, cogent argument for starting construction of the rapid transit subway that Pittsburgh has been discussing for so many years.

Plans were submitted for a line to run from the North Side through the Golden Triangle to the East End.

If desirable, it can be constructed in sections.

The first section lies within the First and Second Wards, and can be financed with the unexpended $5,900,000 of the $6,000,000 bond issue which the people voted in 1919 for subway construction.

Another section would continue the line from Seneca street to Craig street, and a third to a terminus in East Liberty. These two sections, it is estimated, would cost $5,600,000 each, and, as the subway would be a self-liquidating public improvement, it is suggested that the money be borrowed from the United States government.

The extension to the North Side in which the city has already invested a considerable sum, would follow.

It is to be hoped that the Council and the Mayor will act on the recommendation favorably and swiftly.

The need of rapid transit is obvious. It was formally recognized by vote of the citizens 14 years ago, and has become greater as the years have passed.

Seventy per cent of the people who come downtown have to use the street cars, which are slow and crowded. What a relief it would be to travel in swift subway trains instead!

It is contemplated that the Pittsburgh Railways Company shall operate the subway. The company is in no position to finance the construction of the line. If it is to be built, the city must build it.

Let's do it!

Labor for Sales Tax

Congress Should Recognize That Former Opponents of the Plan Have Changed Their Views

Congress should recognize that the nationwide demand for a soundly conceived manufacturers' sales tax has become irresistible.

There has recently been a hasty and significant retreat among the leading opponents of the idea.

President Roosevelt himself, who had been opposed to the sales tax, indicated to Congressional leaders that he would not veto such a measure.

Now William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, has made even a more complete turnabout in his views. Withdrawing his previous opposition, he now favors a sales tax as a means of providing the sinews for a governmental program of relief of unemployment.

In his testimony before the House Ways and Means Committee, Mr. Green advocated a modified sales tax, exempting medicine and certain foodstuffs.

Of the sales tax, he said: "If the sales tax is imposed, then everybody will be paying something. Then why should not every community in the country benefit from it? The government then can make outright grants to any state, city or town that has a worthwhile public works project ready to start."

Speaking for the Chamber of Commerce of the United States, Henry I. Harriman, president, said: "We favor a general manufacturers' sales tax to provide part of the revenue needed by the government . . . the manufacturers' sales tax is the fairest item on the Treasury's alternative tax program . . ."

It is gratifying to the Hearst newspapers, which for many years have advocated the sales tax principle, to find such growing enthusiasm in important quarters.

It is to be hoped that Congress, responsive to public opinion, will accelerate the process of economic recovery by adding tax reform to its array of rehabilitation measures.

Business generally would be encouraged by an effort to introduce scientific and comparatively painless taxation instead of hodge podge, ill conceived imposts.

The sales tax is needed now as an emergency measure to finance the Federal re-employment projects.

After it has demonstrated its merit, it can be used later to supplement permanent taxes, and make possible a reduction in burdensome income taxes.

The general manufacturers' sales tax, which has succeeded admirably in Canada, will prove the means of making taxation in the United States more orderly, more equitable, and more productive.

Relief in Public Works

Private Rehabilitation Projects Also Could Be Used to Furnish Jobs to the Idle.

With agents of the County Commissioners again in Washington in an effort to negotiate a $20,000,000 loan from the federal government for local public works, hope is stimulated that these projects will soon be under way.

The Commissioners should build, with the least possible delay, the proposed bridges across the Monongahela at Homestead and the Allegheny at Aspinwall, and should purchase and improve the Wabash Railroad bridge and tunnel. By charging tolls they can be made self-liquidating projects, and so eligible for loans from the Reconstruction Finance Corporation.

The Commissioners also should build the Town Hall, another potentially self-liquidating enterprise.

But public works, as instrumentalities for relieving unemployment, should be supplemented by private rehabilitation projects.

With government aid we believe it would be possible to substitute work relief for direct relief in the case of most of the more than 70,000 persons now on the welfare list in the county.

Gov. Gifford Pinchot is furnishing work relief by giving jobs to thousands on the state roads. He should apply that principle more extensively. One way in which he can do so is to arrange to use Pennsylvania's share of the $500,000,000 recently voted by Congress for relief to finance meritorious work projects on which the destitute and idle can be given remunerative jobs.

In the Public Interest

By JULIUS G. BERENS
Financial Editor, New York American

The public has long been mystified by the great power wielded by the private banking houses. Yet their operations have never been explained to the public nor have the public authorities had the courage heretofore to inquire into their practices.

The private banker has been the sacred cow of the financial world.

Therefore the Senate investigation should prove of value to the nation.

It should prove highly enlightening to the public which has always known of the existence of these private banking houses, but has never fully appreciated their colossal power, their control of the country's financial machine, their domination of the nation's industries and their influence IN politics and OVER politicians.

No far-reaching reform in banking can be effected unless and until the private bankers' power and influence and operations are understood and properly regulated in the public interest.

The public in the exercise of its full rights and privileges, therefore expects the Senate inquiry to answer for the public these questions:

Do the private bankers dominate the great banks?

Do the private bankers, through their dominant influence over the great banks, also dominate American industry?

By what right or might do they exercise such domination?

BY WHAT MEANS DO THESE GREAT PRIVATE BANKING HOUSES, ANSWERABLE TO NO PUBLIC REGULATORY BODY, OBTAIN AND HOLD THEIR VAST CONTROL OVER FINANCE AND INDUSTRY?

DO THEIR LINKS EXTEND TO THE TOPMOST RUNGS OF THE POLITICAL LADDER?

The private banker has been charged with principal responsibility for the great financial evils of the past sad decade.

Vindictiveness has no role in the Senate inquiry. Yet the Senate committee cannot overlook its great opportunity to disclose to the public once and for all the practices, lack of responsibility to the public, amazing power, of these private banking houses.

If he has nothing to hide then the public will have ample reason to dissipate its suspicion of the private banker.

If not, there will have been developed sufficient reason, sufficient evidence, to prompt necessary and historic legislation IN THE PUBLIC INTEREST.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, May 23.—Central Park South, comprising those two expansive blocks of recessive towers, has become the most urban and frisky strip in town. Much of celebrity glamour of the old Broadway Rialto has eddied there, and the late afternoon promenade is a sparkle of topliners.

Tea rooms and hotel lounges echo with gossip of the stage and screen and many of the shoestring productions incubate there. Nobody knows the why of the sudden theatrical swing to the area. Some say it began when reporters tried to ferret out Garbo, tilting a coyness among its spires.

Garbo living on Central Park South! And the sheep came tumbling after. Maurice Chevalier, too, gave a perk to its popularity. Also Robert L. Ripley, with his penthouse atop an athletic club, a gathering place for those of headline quality after the play. And Ward Morehouse's parties.

This afternoon I saw Daniel Frohman, as detached as a merman, idling in the cross flow. Blanche Yurka debouched from a taxi to be swallowed by Rumplemayer's. A group congealed at the curb included Jack Haley, Bert Lytell and Billy Gaxton. And Helen Menken, a vision in green, spun outward through a revolving door.

A persistent search to find the theatrical flavor of the old Bartholdi Inn always ends in failure. It was chiefly tenanted by acrobats, chorus girls and gentlemen of the ensemble. Respectable enough, there was a racy flavor of flippant patter that made it exciting. Its lobby was, the last time I was there, freaked with the absurdity of a hand-balancer entering the elevator, feet in the air.

An accomplished snapper-up of time drifted in this morning to show he had mastered "Wait for the Wagon" on a jew's harp. I halted in midair, so to speak, patiently to listen and murmured congratulations. That encouraged him to show me how he could imitate a bull frog with the instrument, and he promises to be back in a few days to reveal the perfection of something even dandier—the cry of a cricket. Thus does the earnest struggle to exist become increasingly comic.

No one in the upper social realms so definitely embodies the refinements of aristocracy as Mrs. Vincent Astor. Of her guild she is most sensitive to limelight. She is gracious to society writers, but sidesteps interviews and is perhaps the only owner of a parterre box at the Metropolitan who never occupies it. These observations were inspired by a department store sales girl who told me today that of all customers she waited upon, Mrs. Astor was the most considerate.

A few chairs removed from Edouard Herriot at a private dinner gave an excellent chance for a closeup of one who has been heralded as France's most indefatigable chain smoker. He lived up to his reputation, constantly swallowing billows of smoke and exhaling them with the ferocity of a snorting bull. While he smoked but a puff or two from each cigaret or cigar he was forever lighting another.

Non-smokers, I suppose, tingle with self-righteousness in watching the other fellow's inroads on tobacco. For instance, I noted Aubrey Eads burnt up 16 between the arrival of coffee and time for a late movie. In one long upgrade of newspapering, a lobster trick, as it is known in the trade, where I reported for work at 3 a. m., I used to limit myself to an even dozen before the several scalding cups of coffee that formed my 6 a. m. breakfast. After that, brakes were off. And, like every cigaret smoker, I thought every other smoker was smoking entirely too much.

Among golden wedding celebration gifts to the Charles M. Schwabs recently were a gold golf stick, a telegram from Newcomb Carlton on gold paper, a gold lamp and a profusion of gold table ware. But what seemed to please the steel master as much as anything else was a package of appropriately named cigarets from a treasurer friend who had taken his licking in the market.

LISTEN, WORLD

By Elsie Robinson

Life—you want it, don't you?

Want it greedily, hotly when you're young; wistfully, desperately, as you grow older. Yet, no matter how much you're living, you're haunted by the fear that you're missing something—that you're not getting the most out of life.

But how can you get the most out of life? Will you, perhaps, get more as the years go by? Maybe, if you live long enough. So you think of life in terms of years, hoping to live long enough to get all there is out of it.

But you can't measure living by years. Years don't make life. You might easily exist for a hundred years and yet hardly live at all, in any real sense of the world. On the other hand, you might die at twenty, and yet have known an abundant and triumphant life.

FOR IT ISN'T HOW LONG YOU LIVE, BUT HOW MUCH YOU LIVE, THAT COUNTS.

"Not length of time, but depth of life," said Emerson.

But what gives "depth to life?"

What can give YOU the joy and wonder and adventure that you want so furiously?

Can you find it by going places?

No; you've tried that, and for a while it was fun. But so soon it passed, like a picture winding off a reel! Now, even the most exciting memory does not thrill you. All those things you saw, wonderful though they were, did nothing for your life.

Can you deepen life, then, by owning things?

No; you've tried that, too. There was that watch you waited so long to buy. That car which was your hungry dream for years. That string of amethysts. That bungalow. Wonderful, exciting Things—how they thrilled you in anticipation! How cold they leave you now.

Then perhaps the secret of a real life, a deep life, lies in success—getting ahead; putting yourself across? Surely powerful, famous people are happy! Are they? Go out and look into their lonely, dissatisfied eyes!

No; the thing you've done can turn to ashes in your hands as surely as the thing you've bought or the thing you've seen.

Then isn't there any way to live deeply, richly—to get the most out of life?

Yes, there is.

BUT IT'S ALL AN INSIDE JOB.

YOU, YOURSELF—AND YOU, ALONE — CAN MAKE YOUR OWN LIFE DEEP, AND RICH, AND POWERFUL.

Not by owning things; not by doing things; but by FEELING THINGS and THINKING THINGS is life made wonderful!

A million things may happen around you and to you, and yet you'll live as dumbly and drearily as any clam through all your years.

BUT THE MOMENT YOU FEEL ANYTHING DEEPLY, OR THINK ANYTHING BRAVELY, YOUR WHOLE LIFE WILL BE CHANGED.

AND THE MORE YOU DARE TO THINK AND FEEL, THE MORE YOUR LIFE WILL BE CHANGED — THE DEEPER YOUR LIFE WILL GROW.

But, remember; it isn't enough to just vibrate emotionally or copycat somebody else's mental patter. You must REALLY feel. You must REALLY think. You must have the courage to open your heart and mind to all of life—to the bitter as well as the sweet.

And that won't be easy. For if you dare to feel, you're in for many a heartache. And if you dare to think, you're due for an awful headache. And you'll never again be perfectly comfortable or confident.

BUT YOU'LL HAVE LIVED! AND LIFE IS WORTH ANYTHING IT COSTS.

So if you really want life, it's your's for the taking. This instant you can begin to live—if you have the nerve! And, having begun, nothing can ever take life from you and your friends—

BUT AS LONG AS YOU DARE TO THINK AND FEEL, NO POWER IN HEAVEN OR HELL CAN LOOSE YOUR GRIP ON LIFE.

ONCE OVERS

By J. J. Mundy

Do you constantly fight yourself in some game in which you wish to excel?

Instead of getting pleasure out of it, you generally end the game in a high-pitched state of anger.

Instead, you are so fatigued, and your nervous system so wrought up, that you are really fighting mad at the end.

Then do you return home in such a mood?

If so, you devour your meal hastily—and woe unto any members of the family who may offer suggestions or complaints about anything.

In consequence your digestive machinery suffers, being unable to meet the demands of preparing bolted food for the physical system.

Then comes distress and general discomfort.

All this because you want to become expert in some line.

To become proficient, one must begin exercise in childhood.

You have not worked up to it, but want to shine by an excess of indulgence in the line you espouse, and it robs you of all that you might gain.

Why not be sensible about your games and other work, and preserve your health at the same time?

WORDS OF THE WISE

Wars are just to those to whom they are necessary.—Burke.

He who refuses what is just gives up everything to him who is armed.—Lucan.

Life every man holds dear; but the brave man holds honor far more precious-dear than life.—Shakespeare.

It is to have made great progress in cunning when you have made people think you are only moderately cunning.—La Bruyere.

Benefits are acceptable, while the receiver thinks he may return them; but one exceeding that, hatred is given instead of thanks.—Tacitus.

Let us have faith that Right makes Might, and in that faith let us to the end dare to do our duty as we understand it.—Lincoln.

When a work raises your soul and inspires you with brave and noble sentiments, it is good, and done by the hand of a workman.—La Bruyere.

Men of age object too much, consult too long, adventure too little, repent too soon, and seldom drive business home to the full period, but content themselves with mediocrity of success.—Bacon.

For want of decency is want of sense. —Roscommon.

The most terrific thing in the world is sin. A man is never hurt until his soul is hurt, and the only thing that can hurt his soul is sin.—Plumer.

The country life is to be preferred, for there we see the works of God; but in cities, little else but the works of men, and the one makes a better subject for our contemplation than the other.—Penn.
